Tech to help banks ‘survive and prosper,’ says Abraham

The application of technology will be applied to many of the processes, which were done manually.

The strength of QNB’s capital “allows us to grow our balance sheet in a controlled way and maintain our capital ratios.”

On the current state of banking sector, al-Khalifa said, “The rapid pace of innovation and the role of technology in the banking sector is already very significant. They will be applied in the processes of automation in the banking sector. Just like a self-driving car, technology is also going to change the dynamics of technology in the banking sector.”

Abraham being interviewed by Conference Director Sheikh Khalid bin Al Khalifa, Chief Executive Officer, at the opening session of the “Tunisian banking sector and digital technology. First International Conference on the Tunisian banking sector and digital technology”.

Abraham said, “Qatar has a high net investible surplus available with its population. As they will also see a lot of good opportunities that are unfolding, this is how we are going to see a lot more automation, straight through processing and results, but that is also going to apply in the process of automation. On 2016 QNB’s banking sector ratio was 4%. For 2017 it was 3.2%. And for 2018 it was 2.6% and for 2019 it is expected to be 2.6%. We are going to see a lot more automation, straight through processing and results, but that is also going to apply in the process of automation.”

He added, “As India continues to make big steps towards achieving the ambition of its banking sector, we are going to see a lot more automation, straight through processing and results, but that is also going to apply in the process of automation.”

Manateq awards Al Wukair Logistics Park project to GWC

Manateq, the national initiative working to diversify Qatar’s economic infrastructure within strategic economic zones, has announced the award of Al Wukair Logistics Park development to Civil Contracting Company (GCC). Under this agreement, GCC will build, operate and maintain the entire development of the vibrant private sector and national change for completion within two years, with the private sector due immediately with a first phase representing almost 40% of the park due to be developed within five years. GCC is proud to be entrusted with developing the country’s logistics infrastructure while setting new benchmarks for logistics excellence that is adopted internationally, “stated Sheikh Abdulla bin Sherida al-Kaabi, also the president of Qatar National Vision 2030, as the ideal location for businesses to pursue their opportunities, positioning Qatar as the ideal gateway to the region and the world,”宇宙 said.

The contract, which was subject to competitive bidding, will allow GCC to design, finance, develop, operate and maintain the entire development, consisting of dry, cold, frozen and chemical storage facilities as well as light workshops and warehousing open yards.

Pakistan sets up monitoring units for real estate transactions

The Federal Board of Revenue (FBR) of Pakistan has set up special monitoring units to keep track of real estate transactions in the country and to detect any tax evasion.

The move comes amidst growing concerns about tax evasion in the real estate sector as builders and developers are known to manipulate prices and values of properties to evade taxes.

The FBR has established the units in four cities, including Karachi, Lahore, Islamabad, and Peshawar, and has appointed officers to monitor the transactions.

The units will have the power to impose penalties on those who fail to comply with tax laws.

The FBR has been under pressure to take action against tax evasion in the real estate sector, which is one of the country's largest sources of revenue.

In November, the biggest gain since January; has found a little bit more confi dence.

Everyone wants to know about the green bond market.

The market has seen a surge in issuance of green bonds in the past year, with $51 billion of new issues in 2020, compared to $11 billion in 2019.

The EMA, which oversees the market, said the growth in green bonds is driven by a number of factors, including regulatory incentives, growing investor appetite and increased awareness.

Salam International Investment Management

"The market is seeing a lot of interest in green bonds as investors seek to align their portfolios with environmental goals.

We expect the market to continue to grow in the coming years, as more issuers and investors become aware of the benefits of green bonds."

The EMA also noted that the market is becoming more diverse, with issuers from a variety of sectors and regions.

"There are now issuers from the energy, transportation, real estate, and financial services sectors, among others," said Fane Bannister, director of the EMA.

"This is an area where today we expect to see more issuers and investors entering the market."

HSBC reshapes its senior team ahead of next CEO's arrival

One of New York's largest banks has reshaped its management hierarchy in preparation for the arrival of the next chief executive officer.

The bank said late Wednesday that it has promoted 12 executives, including several from outside the bank, to take on key roles in the US and Asia.

The moves come after the bank's current CEO, Andy Haldane, announced his resignation earlier this month. The bank has been searching for a new CEO since Haldane's departure was announced in late July.

The new leadership team includes several high-profile hires from other banks and financial services companies.

Among the promotions announced on Wednesday is Samir Assaf, who will become head of the bank's US operations. Assaf was most recently the chief executive of Credit Suisse's US arm.

The bank also said it will appoint a new chief financial officer, a role that has been vacant since March.

The new leadership team is expected to take over from Haldane in the coming months, said people with knowledge of the matter.

The reshuffle comes as HSBC continues to grapple with a string of scandals and legal issues, including a $1.3 billion fine for money laundering.

The bank has also been under pressure from shareholders to improve its profitability and return more capital to investors.

The bank's shares have fallen about 10% this year, lagging behind peers such as JPMorgan Chase and Bank of America.

The reshuffle is expected to be detailed in more detail during HSBC's annual general meeting in June.
Qatari-Turkish partnership an inspiring model of bilateral agreements, says al-Kuwari

The High Level Public and Private Investment Conference in Istanbul yesterday.

The rate-setting Federal Open Market Committee in its quarterly economic report said it would keep its benchmark interest rate unchanged at least through December 2020, as it continues to monitor the effects of the coronavirus pandemic.

The Federal Reserve is considered a key player in the global economy, and its decisions on interest rates have a significant impact on financial markets around the world. The current low-interest rate environment is intended to support economic growth and help mitigate the impact of the pandemic on the economy.

The FOMC also noted that the challenges facing the board are likely to persist in the coming months, with the economic outlook remaining highly uncertain and subject to significant risks.

The board is also monitoring developments in financial sectors, including the shadow banking system, and will provide continued support to the financial system as needed.

The FOMC decision was accompanied by a statement from Chairman Jerome Powell, who noted that the Fed’s commitment to monetary policy support is unwavering and will continue as long as needed.

Powell emphasized that the Fed’s goal is to promote maximum employment and price stability, and that its decisions are guided by the principles of economic freedom and fairness.

He said that the Fed’s focus remains on supporting the recovery and ensuring that it reaches all sectors of the economy, particularly those affected by the coronavirus outbreak.

The FOMC’s decision is likely to be welcomed by investors and policymakers alike, who have been awaiting the Fed’s next move on interest rates.

In the meantime, investors will continue to monitor developments in financial markets and other key economic indicators to assess the Fed’s next possible moves on interest rates.

US Fed to hold fire as economy ends 2019 on a strong note

The US Federal Reserve, which is considered a key player in the global economy, has decided to keep its benchmark interest rate unchanged at least through December 2020, as it continues to monitor the effects of the coronavirus pandemic.

The current low-interest rate environment is intended to support economic growth and help mitigate the impact of the pandemic on the economy.

The Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) also noted that the challenges facing the board are likely to persist in the coming months, with the economic outlook remaining highly uncertain and subject to significant risks.

Bankers’ Take

US banks, which have been hit hard by the coronavirus pandemic, are now looking to boost their earnings by increasing fees on customer accounts. This comes as the banks continue to grapple with lower interest rates and increased loan losses.

The move by US banks to increase fees is part of a broader strategy to mitigate the impact of the pandemic on their earnings. The banks are also looking at other ways to generate revenue, such as boosting investment banking fees and fees from credit card and debit card transactions.

However, the move is likely to draw criticism from customers, who may see it as a sign that the banks are trying to recoup losses incurred during the pandemic. This could lead to a decrease in customer satisfaction and potentially result in a decrease in deposits and other fees.

The banks are also facing pressure from regulators to ensure that they are not overcharging customers. This could lead to a decrease in profits if the banks are forced to reduce fees.

Overall, the move by US banks to increase fees is a reflection of the challenges they are facing during the pandemic, and it highlights the need for the industry to find new ways to generate revenue in order to sustain their operations in the long term.
Qatar Chamber reviews ties with Istanbul metal exporters’ group

O utside of Qatar Chamber and a deliberate decision to hold the meeting of Metal and Non-Ferrous Metals Exporters’ Association, a meeting of metal exporters’ group was held in Doha to review co-operation opportunities.
