3-phase plan to reimpose some Covid curbs faster

- MoPH to decide on implementing the Supreme Committee plan: GCO
- Phase 4 of gradual lifting of Covid-19 restrictions in Qatar to continue
- Mandatory quarantine for all returning to Qatar until further notice

The Supreme Committee for Covid-19 Vaccination Management has approved a three-phase plan to reimpose some Covid-19 restrictions in Qatar, in order to prevent the spread of the coronavirus pandemic in the country. The plan will be subject to the recommendations of the Ministry of Public Health (MoPH), based on its continuous monitoring of health indicators in the country. In a statement issued through the Supreme Committee of the Public Health and Community Services (GCOS), the Supreme Committee and the Ministry of Public Health of Qatar (MoPH), based on its continuous monitoring of health indicators in the country, have decided to implement the first phase of the gradual lifting of Covid-19 restrictions in the country, which will continue as long as no further travel restrictions are imposed and until the end of the month of Ramadan.

While the public health indicators continue to improve and have been contained in the country, the Supreme Committee of the Public Health and Community Services (GCOS) has decided to implement the first phase of the gradual lifting of Covid-19 restrictions in the country, which will continue as long as no further travel restrictions are imposed and until the end of the month of Ramadan.

Affirming the continuation of the gradual lifting of the gradual lifting of Covid-19 restrictions, the Supreme Committee statement said: “The spread of the Covid-19 pandemic around the world and in Qatar has made it essential to contain a number of measures that have been taken to control the spread of the virus.” The statement noted that, as a result of the gradual lifting of Covid-19 restrictions, the country will continue in Phase 4 of the gradual lifting of Covid-19 restrictions in the country, which will continue as long as no further travel restrictions are imposed and until the end of the month of Ramadan.

Paris faces further curbs as coronavirus surges

The French government has announced further restrictions to combat the coronavirus pandemic in the country. The restrictions include a new curfew that will come into effect from 9 p.m. to 6 a.m. on weekends and public holidays, starting this Saturday.

France is currently experiencing a surge in Covid-19 cases, with the number of new infections increasing in recent weeks. The French government has announced that the curfew will be implemented in the Paris region and other areas where the virus is spreading rapidly.

法官Orders airlines to refund bookings

A French judge has ordered airlines to refund bookings to passengers who were forced to cancel flights due to lockdown restrictions imposed in response to the coronavirus pandemic. The judge’s ruling comes after a case was brought to court by a group of passengers who were unable to travel due to lockdown restrictions.

The judge said that airlines should refund passengers for flights that were cancelled due to lockdown restrictions. The judge ruled that airlines are responsible for providing passengers with refunds when flights are cancelled due to lockdown restrictions.

Kremlin critic Navalny vows return to Russia

Russian opposition leader Alexei Navalny has vowed to return to Russia, despite facing a possible prison sentence. The opposition leader was arrested in January in Moscow and has been in jail since then. Navalny, who is a vocal critic of Russian President Vladimir Putin, was also arrested in 2013 and served two years in prison.

Navalny said that he was committed to returning to Russia, despite the possibility of a prison sentence. He said that he would not give up his fight against corruption and for democratic values.

The opposition leader has been a vocal critic of Putin and has accused the Russian leader of corruption and human rights violations. Navalny’s return to Russia has been met with mixed reactions, with some expressing concerns about his safety.

Qatar, WHO discuss ways to strengthen co-operation

The Minister of Public Health, Dr Hanan Mohamed al-Kuwaiti, held a videoconference with the Director-General of the World Health Organization, Dr Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus, to discuss ways to strengthen co-operation between Qatar and the WHO and developments on the coronavirus pandemic.

During the video conference, they also discussed Qatar’s participation in the 75th World Health Assembly, which is taking place virtually this year. Dr Ghebreyesus thanked His Highness the Amir Sheikh Tamim bin Hamad Al-Thani for his keenness to support the organisation during the coronavirus pandemic.

Dr Ghebreyesus also discussed the distinguished Qatari experience in combating the Covid-19 pandemic and the role of the WHO during the pandemic. The meeting was attended by senior officials from the Ministry of Public Health and the WHO.

The new facility also plays the role of a central nervous system, which is responsible for providing key services and forecasts to its beneficiaries, including researchers and patients. The centre has been established under the direction of the Supreme Committee for Covid-19 Vaccination Management, which oversees the implementation of the country’s vaccination program.

Alphanz expatiates Roji Shazar Khan also known as Musa Jan talks about his 50 years of stay in Qatar

By Moinuddin Raja

The history of human migration from one place to another is a part of the human race. It is a story of when and where we were born and how. When they were better in a place, they left and moved to another. Alphanz narrates his progress in Qatar with great admiration for the country.

"Everything else was perfect in my country except the fact that we were not well off and we had no money. For us, the Alphanz were not included in any social circle other than the Alphanz. They were not treated as fellow human beings. They used to be treated as inferior. They were not even allowed to live in the same building as the Alphanz," he said.

Musa was received by his family at the airport and he started working as a laborer to help his family. His father used to be the manager of a printing press. The first thing he noticed was the change. "It was very tough to live in that kind of environment. We had no proper food and clothes," he said.

The work started to improve as time passed and the company started getting bigger contracts. "We started getting more work and our family started making money," he said. "Our family started to have a better life."

Musa also used to record his voice on tape to communicate with his family back home. "Though letter writing was common, we also used to record our voice messages on audio cassettes. People would give these cassettes to their families back home. On return, they would bring the cassettes with messages from the family. In our times, we used to go to晚会 in the evening. During work break we used to take rest in a nearby mosque where air-conditioning was available. People used to buy water from water carriers. We used to go to bed early as we had to start work early in the morning," he said.

Musa hasn't left Qatar and today owns a construction company and has sent his children to college.

Abdullah sees little change in US policy regardless of poll results

Prime Minister Imran Khan’s speech at the 75th United Nations General Assembly (UNGA) on Tuesday was the most-watched video among world leaders on UN YouTube page with more than 111 million views since it was uploaded on September 27, according to a Reuters analysis of UN data.

In his address, Khan repeated his country’s commitment to a peaceful Afghanistan, and said Pakistan was ready to “fight for the sake of stability and peace” in the region.

However, Abdullah, who leads the Afghan peace process, said there had been little change in US policy regardless of the result of the upcoming US presidential election. He added that the two countries had a “functional relationship” that was not going to change regardless of the result.

Abdullah said in an interview with Reuters on Wednesday that he would continue to work on the Afghan peace process even if the Taliban were to win the election, and that he would maintain a “constructive” relationship with the new US administration.

He added that he would be ready to hold talks with the Taliban if they were to win, but that he would not go to Doha to meet the group.

The Taliban have been21 rejecting the idea of talks with the Afghan government, and have been demanding full sovereignty for their own rule.

Abdullah said that there had been little change in US policy regardless of the result of the upcoming US presidential election. He added that the two countries had a “functional relationship” that was not going to change regardless of the result.

He added that he would be ready to hold talks with the Taliban if they were to win, but that he would not go to Doha to meet the group.

The Taliban have been rejecting the idea of talks with the Afghan government, and have been demanding full sovereignty for their own rule.

Covid milestone: a milestone with deep undercurrents

Covid-19 officially claimed in milestone victims this week, according to Johns Hopkins University.

As of this writing, the milestone was likely reached months ago. Most global health officials believe the milestone has been underestimated in some countries — including the US.

The coronavirus does not stop at national borders. In fact, it's the recent opening of the US-Pakistan border, the United Nations and other international institutions, as well as the US-Pakistan border, that may be particularly pernicious when a proven vaccine arrives.

In the meantime, the United Nations and other international organizations, as well as the US-Pakistan border, have been working to coordinate international efforts to combat the virus.

Some countries have been considerably more successful in containing the virus than others.

In the US, where the virus has been spreading rapidly, the government has been criticized for its slow response and lack of testing capacity.

In other countries, such as South Korea and New Zealand, the virus has been largely contained through aggressive testing and contact tracing.
