Government workers get training for strategic planning

The Ministry of Administrative Development, Labour and Social Affairs, represented by the Institute of Public Administration, conducted the results-based strategic planning workshop with the participation of employees of the planning and quality departments working in 15 government entities.

The six-week training programme focused on the participating employees to enable them to prepare the results-based strategic plan document and project documents for their work entities, enabling them to enhance the implementation process and use indicators to measure the results achieved.

Planning and implementation of this programme seeks to meet the needs of government entities and enable them to plan the planning and quality departments to respond to the requirements of implementing the second stage of the results-based strategic planning and the Qatar National Vision 2030; the directive of His Highness the Amir in national development and the strategic planning approach based on results.

The programme is consistent with the planning methodology adopted in Qatar, which focuses on the main results that government agencies seek to achieve, as it includes a sequential training module that begins with the general framework of results-based strategic planning and the Qatar National Vision 2030, the directive of His Highness the Amir in national development and the strategic planning approach based on results.

The programme included ten sequential training modules that began with the general framework of results-based strategic planning and the Qatar National Vision 2030, the directive of His Highness the Amir in national development and the strategic planning approach based on results.

Participants were also trained to prepare the results-based strategic plan document and its projects and to focus on the behavioural aspects related to this results-based strategic planning process in a way that adds the concept of the results-based strategic planning approach to the results-based strategic planning and the Qatar National Vision 2030, the directive of His Highness the Amir in national development and the strategic planning approach based on results.

EAA condemns armed raid on Nigeria school education Above All (EAA) Foundation strongly condemned the armed raid on a secondary school in Katsina, Nigeria, on Friday evening, which left hundreds of students training. EAA called on the urgent need for nations to take concrete steps to protect education from attack to ensure that the fundamental human right to access to safe, quality education is realized, according to a statement issued by Mubarak al-Thani, head of Advocacy at EAA, commented: “The most recent attack in Nigeria must act as a rallying cry to the international community to protect education. We must realize the growing awareness of the importance that lies in protecting the next generation’s right to education as the single most effective means of creating prosperous, peaceful and virtuous societies. In addition to the immediate relief to the victims, this attack reinforces the need for continued education between government and its partners to ensure that education is protected from attacks. Other sides of peace and security are also important, but education is a key to sustainable development.”

It was on September 9 this year that EAA condemned the tragic UN International Day to Protect Education from Attack. Earlier this year, EAA called on the international community to act as a rallying cry to the international community to protect education. The recent attack in Nigeria reminds us of the importance of the need for nations to take concrete steps to protect education from attack to ensure that the fundamental human right to access to safe, quality education is realized, according to a statement issued by Mubarak al-Thani, head of Advocacy at EAA, commented: “The most recent attack in Nigeria must act as a rallying cry to the international community to protect education. Qatar Charity (QC) and Qatar Fund for Development (QFFD) signed a grant agreement to support urgent relief in northern Syria as part of the “Quest Health” initiative.

The move came in view of the problematic humanitarian situations of the displaced, the severe humanitarian needs, the damage to most medical facilities and other health services essential for daily life, the absence of many primary health services, the scarcity of necessary medicines and vaccines, and the lack of equipped hospitals.

Under this agreement, the two parties announced the allocation of US $ 6,966,148, and through the QFFD’s ‘Quest’ initiative, Qatar Charity will implement several health projects.

Primary Health Care

The pact includes the implementation of many specialized health projects in the governorates of Idlib and Aleppo, improving access to life-saving primary health services by operating 6 primary health care centers in northern Syria, and operating central warehouses for medical supplies and a Qatar clinics complex in Afrin, in addition to operating an ambulance and referral system in Northwestern Syria.

Currently, a project is under implementation to strengthen specialized health services in both Idlib and Aleppo where the hospitals under the project were equipped.

Under this project, three hospitals will receive support to offer continued health services to the local population, and 12-month operating costs will be provided. Besides, outpatient clinics and health centers will receive a set of medical equipment. In addition, obstetric and newborn care services will be offered at the women and children’s specialized hospital, which provides maternal and child health care services, including pediatrics and reproductive health. Some 111,600 persons are expected to benefit from this project.

Approximately 201,600 people are expected to benefit from the health care services and medical consultations provided under the project aimed at improving access to life-saving primary health services by operating 6 primary health care centers and training health personnel in northern Syria.

Ambulances

Some 10 ambulances, have been purchased, equipped with medical equipment, and sent into Syria. The ambulances have been operational since early this month under the ambulance and referral system project by focusing on transporting patients in emergencies.

The agreement covers the payment of the 12-month operating costs for the 10 ambulances, crews and employees to provide emergency patient transport services. These ambulances are operational over all regions of northern Syria according to the need and geographical areas. Some 10,000 people are expected to benefit from the project.

This project aims to achieve drug sufficiency and reduce the burden on the beneficiaries, in addition to providing other medical services.

California could allow mass evictions to begin

Guardian Real and Media

California's housing shortage has long forced tenants to compete for a limited supply of homes, resulting in a biased and unpredictable eviction process. With outbreaks of the vicious illness, the death toll has risen sharply.

The state's eviction moratorium has already expired, allowing landlords to proceed with evictions. However, the state's housing courts have only recently started to process cases, leading to delays and backlogs.

Despite efforts to expedite the eviction process, many tenants are still facing eviction, leading to a severe housing crisis in California. The state's housing market is already dire before Covid, and the pandemic has only exacerbated the problem.

Governor Gavin Newsom, who has been criticized for not doing enough to address the housing crisis, has announced that he will be implementing a temporary ordinance blocking evictions to preserve housing.

The ordinance, adopted by the Governor, is expected to provide some relief to tenants facing eviction. However, many tenants are still at risk of losing their homes, leading to a severe housing crisis in California.

Germany orders partial lockdown to curb Covid

Russia

President Vladimir Putin has surprised his top political and defence officials by suddenly ordering a lockdown to try and curb spiralling coronavirus cases.

In a sweeping new measure, the Russian president said that a nationwide lockdown would be imposed from next week, including in the capital Moscow.

Putin said the new measures were needed because the country was “not yet able to control the situation”, despite the fact that Russia was “among the leaders in Southeast Europe”.

However, the announcement has sparked criticism from opposition leaders, who have accused Putin of using the pandemic to divert attention from his own failed policies.

The measures come after a series of protests against Putin’s rule, which have been taking place across Russia in recent weeks.

Armenia, Azerbaijan trade blame over deadly post-cessfire clashes

Armenia and Azerbaijan traded blame yesterday over deadly post-ceasefire clashes in Nagorno-Karabakh.

The clashes, which have escalated in recent days, have raised concerns about the stability of the region.

Armenia’s defence ministry said that regional forces had been attacked on Friday, while Baku’s military said that Armenian armed forces had violated the ceasefire terms.

The Nagorno-Karabakh conflict has been a source of tension between Armenia and Azerbaijan since the 1990s, when the region declared independence from Azerbaijan.

But in recent years, the conflict has escalated, with both sides accusing each other of violating the ceasefire agreements.

The latest flare-up comes after a series of clashes in the region over the past week, including one on Saturday that left two people dead.

The clashes have also sparked international concern, with the United Nations calling for an immediate halt to the fighting.

Lithuania

The Lithuanian government has imposed a partial lockdown in the capital Vilnius and surrounding regions, as well as in the neighbouring regions of Panevezys and Kaunas, in a bid to control the spread of Covid-19.

The measures, which came into effect last night, include the closure of non-essential shops and schools,以及 the ban on gatherings of more than two people.

The government has also announced that all non-essential travel between Lithuania and the Baltic states will be banned.

Spain

Spain has imposed a two-week lockdown in Madrid and the surrounding areas, as well as in the region of Galicia, in an effort to control the spread of Covid-19.

The measures, which came into effect on Saturday, include the closure of non-essential shops and schools, as well as the ban on gatherings of more than two people.

The government has also announced that all non-essential travel between Spain and the European Union will be banned.

Covid-19 treatment points to potential Covid-19 treatment

Genetic evidence is second only to clinical trials as a way to test which treatments will be effective in a disease. The discovery of two genes associated with the most severe form of Covid-19 treatment should help doctors.

The breakthrough will help doctors understand how Covid-19 damages lungs at a molecular level.

He said the Covid-19 patients in the ICU were provided by healthy volunteers from other studies, such as UK Biobank, and the genetic results provide a roadmap through the virus itself. The genetic results provide a roadmap through the virus itself. The genetic results provide a roadmap through the virus itself. The genetic results provide a roadmap through the virus itself.

In conclusion, HE al-Mahmoud said that this occasion is an important date for the Qatari people as they reflect on country's achievements in the field of healthcare, as well as in terms of building up families, infrastructure, tourism projects, and many projects, until Covid-19 experiences the final chapters in the history of the country.

He said that Covid-19 remains a major factor in development efforts since the start of the pandemic, which led to a virtual lockdown of the country.

He pointed out that the country continued with achievements in the health sector, in line with the vision of the leadership and the plan of the government. He added that the Council’s role continues in a successful manner in its different departments and in the process of building the future of Qatar.

He said that the council's role continues in a successful manner in its different departments and in the process of building the future of Qatar.
PDM announces plan for long march to Islamabad

The Pakistan Democratic Movement (PDM), an alliance of opposition parties, has announced a plan for a long march to Islamabad, due to be launched on January 14, 2021. The movement was formed to challenge the incumbent government and demand free and fair elections.

The PDM, led by former Prime Minister Shahbaz Sharif, has been pressing for the resignation of the government led by Prime Minister Imran Khan. The movement accuses the government of corruption and dictatorship, and demands a return to democratic governance.

The long march, which will start from several cities across Pakistan, is expected to last for several weeks, with participants planning to converge on Islamabad, the capital city.

Supporters of the Pakistan Democratic Movement (PDM) have decided to hold a massive march to Islamabad, by late January or early February.

The announcement came at a time when the PDM was under pressure from the police, who had previously warned against the march.

Even though the authorities had allowed the activists to reach the venue at 5:00 pm, hundreds of supporters gathered there even earlier, despite the cold weather, using marquees and other makeshift arrangements to protect themselves from the weather.

In answer, PML-N Vice President Marvi Memon supported the call for a march to Islamabad, while the Pakistan Muslim League - Nawaz (PML-N) President Zulfiqar Ali Bhutto also confirmed that the movement was now headed to Islamabad.

PML Chief Mansoor Butt said that the march will take place in January or early February.

The PDM has been pressing for the resignation of Prime Minister Imran Khan and the establishment of a technocratic government.

Khan: Pakistan committed to climate change measures

Prime Minister Imran Khan has reaffirmed Pakistan’s commitment to combat climate change and protect the environment, saying that the country is ready for unveiling, covering a thousand years and settled in 866.

“The first volume of a book, ‘shaping the history of India,’” he wrote on Twitter. “It traces the role they played in our heritage traditions and history. This month I recommend the book ‘Rashid’.”

The book is about Pathan tribes who, he says, came from Afghanistan to the last one thousand years and settled in various parts of the country. The prime minister wrote: “It’s a reminder of the importance of understanding the history of our land.”

He also added that the comprehensive and authentic books on Pathans are needed for uncovering, covering their role in the country’s history which also included cultural heritage and other important aspects.
