A SMS message campaign launched in Qatar is helping to ensure the welfare of the youngest domestic workers and their employers during Ramadan, with the support of the Ministry of Manpower, Qatar Charity, Qatar Red Crescent Society and Qatar Charity (QC).

The messages provide helpful tips on how to prevent Covid-19 transmission but also how to protect the health and rights of domestic workers at home during this challenging period.

"Domestic workers play an essential role in ensuring the health and safety of the families for which they work, whether working in Qatar or coming to work, to support fellow nationals and foreign workers," said O/C technical specialist Ali Faour.

"It is vital that they have access to up-to-date information on Covid-19 prevention measures in languages they understand, so the campaign reaches out to explain their role in protecting themselves and the wider community, including the health and welfare of domestic workers in their homes or in hospitals during the Covid-19 lockdown, when their services are being in demand," he added.

The campaign, targeting domestic workers, aims to explain the symptoms of Covid-19, and how to do it if they have any symptoms. Advice on hygiene, social distancing, and the importance of seeking medical attention will be shared.

At an event held yesterday, Qatar Charity expressed its sincere appreciation to the Almighty that peace, harmony and prosperity were maintained, as a beacon of good and light the need to support the nation as a whole.

Art school teachers often ask me why I 'paint what I want'. I want to answer this question. Why not find a subject that is original and unique? There are many reasons why you might be interested in art, but what if you choose a subject that is unique and original? To answer this question, you need to consider the reasons why you choose to paint a certain subject. You might have chosen it because you want to express yourself, or you might have chosen it because you want to make a statement about something. In either case, you need to consider the reasons why you choose to paint a certain subject.

Lanka president warns UN over war crimes claims

Rajapaksa, a retired army lieutenant colonel, did not single out the United Nations, but his remarks were widely seen as targeting the agency. "The UN is the only third party that can move to sturdier buildings if there is a new flood," he added. "We will not allow anyone or organization to assert undue influence on people and foreign missions." The top rights body has also warned the UN of "serious implications" for its work in Sri Lanka where some 10,000 people were forcibly displaced in 2009 under military rule. The Sri Lankan government said it was in talks with the UN to ensure it was allowed to investigate war crimes allegations.

15 Rohingya migrants arrested for illegal entry into Thailand

Pakhi Murseli in Bangkok

Thai police have arrested 15 Rohingya migrants who entered the country illegally on a speedboat. The migrants were found in Krabi province, where they had been living for several months. This is the second such incident in recent months, after 12 Rohingya migrants were arrested in July. The Thai government has been under pressure to address the issue of illegal immigration, particularly from Myanmar, where violence against Rohingya Muslims has been ongoing. The authorities have arrested several hundred Rohingya people for illegal entry over the past few months, and have been accused of violating human rights.

Thai sees unexpected gains in virus lockdown

Thai officials have reported a significant reduction in daily COVID-19 cases compared to the peak a month ago. The government has attributed this to increased testing and contact tracing, as well as strict lockdowns and social distancing measures. The number of daily cases has fallen from over 1,000 in mid-April to around 150 in mid-May. This is the lowest daily case count since the crisis began in March. The government has been praised for its handling of the pandemic, and has been credited with containing the spread of the virus within the country. The government has been careful not to ease restrictions too quickly, to avoid a possible second wave of infections.
China slams US for ‘dangerous’ message to Taiwan’s newly elected leader

China’s ongoing campaign to isolate Taiwan, though all major Taiwanese parties support “Taiwan independence”, in a rare high-level programme, told AFP.

China has said it would make it an effective tool, amidst growing concern over the possibility of a military conflict between Beijing and Taiwan. But Chinese officials have said they were willing to consider a way to coexist over the long term.

Australia opens up domestic life further as China dispute lingers

China views Tsai as a separatist, in a major ally for Taiwan and is a major ally for Beijing. “Both sides have a duty to the world to find a way to coexist over the long term and preserve the status quo,” she added.

Taiwan relations have been tense since Tsai’s election in 2016, with Beijing putting pressure on countries to cut ties with the island and increasing military exercises near Taiwan’s coast.

Taiwan President urges quick end to lockdown

Taiwan’s President Tsai Ing-wen, who is expected to face growing pressure from China to reunify the island with the mainland, has called for a “coordinated and rapid end to the current lockdown measures”.

Malta turned away migrant boat and sent it to Italy: joint report

Mobsster pocket income support in Italy: police

Germany to ‘clean up’ meat industry after numerous outbreaks

Malta's navy refueled rubber dinghies off Libya today and turned away a boat full of migrants this afternoon, according to the announcement made to the press by the Armed Forces of Malta (AFM), the Guardian and Aurora newspapers.

They quoted one of the migrants as saying: “They came to us and said: ‘Malta has a virus and called some as if you’re being stoned. We can’t take you in. It’s too dangerous. It’s a new engine and tank as well.” They pointed out the engines in “a very good condition”.

The Guardia di Finanza, an Italian police force, was investigating the case and had frozen some of the goods, including a large quantity of fresh eggs and some of the rare, exotic meat.

The Maltese government also rejected the allegations, saying: “We have been told by the authorities in Libya that they have not been able to confirm the reports. We are currently investigating the incident, and we will stand by the results of our investigation.”

Germany's meat industry is one of the largest in Europe, with around 200 companies producing meat products for export. The industry has been hit by a series of outbreaks in recent months, including one in March that caused the shutdown of a major meat processor.

The NGG food union said it was “very concerned” about the outbreaks and called for “massive” ramp up health and safety measures across the industry. The German government agreed to hire more contract workers, and the government agreed to help farmers and processors in the affected areas.

The damage to poultry farms and the meat industry in several countries has been huge, with some farms forced to slaughter entire flocks and others left struggling to stay open. The European Union has pledged to help the affected countries, and the World Health Organization has called for a global coordinated response to the crisis.

The Maltese government has been taking measures to prevent the spread of the virus in Malta, including the closure of borders and the suspension of flights from high-risk countries. The government has also been providing financial support to affected workers and businesses.

The Maltese government has been accused of being slow to respond to the crisis, and some critics have called for a more robust response.

UK retailers threaten Brazil boycott over Amazon law

In an open letter to Brazilian senators and deputies, the UK's Large Clothing Retailers Association (LCRA) and Virgin Money called for a boycott of Brazilian products over a proposed bill that would introduce large fines for companies that fail to source from the Amazon region.

"We are deeply concerned that the proposed bill would increase deforestation and damage protected areas," the letter reads. "We are concerned that the proposed bill would encourage further land grabbing and widespread deforestation on the continent.

"We urge the Department for International Trade to take urgent action to ensure that UK retailers and suppliers do not support the deforestation agenda of the Brazilian government."
Days before Eid, people rush to malls in Karachi

The shopping malls in Karachi have been limited to 70 percent capacity as the public continues to avoid physical distancing, and with only a week to go before Eid ul-Fitr, a large number of people are making a beeline for the malls for shopping, putting at risk the health of the public due to the coronavirus pandemic.

Mall management said that they were making sure that they were following all SOPs to ensure that the shopping experience was safe and that the rush that was being witnessed was not going to cause any traffic jam as people arrive at the malls.

The Sindh government has excused the crowd that is coming into the malls as the rush is caused by the coronavirus and that the country was bifurcated and weakened nationalists and separatist movements, and vowed to give up the "illegal" demand for new polls in not unison.

Metro Manila residents seek shuttle service to workplace

Metro Manila residents ramp up pressure on government to establish shuttle services for some workers allowed to return during the modified enhanced community quarantine (MECQ).

Metro Manila residents demand by 21-4-1045000 data shown that 95% of respondents agreed that government-controlled buses and other shuttle services should be provided in the absence of public transportation. CMN/14-1280-24381

The government is encouraging the private sector to provide shuttles for oriented workers under the Modified Enhanced Community Quarantine (MECQ). “The lack of public transportation is a problem for workers who need to report to their physical workplaces. This is why they need to use a car or motorcycle. We will need to delay the purpose of returning certain sectors of the economy in the first place,” said Arnie Aquino-PHILIPPINES-online managed director of the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA).

President Rodrigo Duterte said the national government and Metro Manila local government units should consider providing government-controlled buses or shuttles for workers under the MECQ. “The idea of providing government-controlled transportation is completely different from the one among Metro Manila households.”

It was a ground-breaking meeting between professional sports organisations and cycling enthusiasts in the country that proved the way to promote the mobility at the country’s major node of transportation while the nation undergoes massive mode of mobility over the past two years.

In the morning, two cyclists met with DOT Cebu, the Department of Transportation (DOT) in Cebu City. The two cyclists were members of the Philippine Cycling Association (PCA). They met with the DOT to discuss the expansion of cycling lanes in Cebu and the implementation of bike lanes in the next lane of development.

There is a need to develop a proof-of-concept design, adapting the bike lanes that have already been launched, according to the cyclists. This is the first iteration of the plan to add bike lanes in Cebu City to accommodate the growing number of cyclists.

The DOT is responsible for the development of the national transportation network and infrastructure, including cycling lanes. The two cyclists, who are members of the PCA, have been advocating for the development of cycling lanes in Cebu City for the past two years.

On the other hand, the DOT has been advocating for the expansion of cycling lanes in the country to accommodate the growing number of cyclists. The two cyclists have been working closely with the DOT to ensure that the development of cycling lanes is done in consultation with the cycling community.

As health experts keep reminding us, life will not return to anything resembling pre-pandemic normal until there is an effective and widely available vaccine. And, as they also keep reminding us, it will take at least a year to do the testing and clinical trials necessary to ensure that a vaccine candidate is safe for mass production.

So it’s never a little soon that President Donald Trump’s effort to expedite a vaccine for Covid-19 has a significant potential for harm because it seems suspiciously connected to the political calendar rather than sound science.

Operation Warp Speed, as its name implies, aims not just to bring a vaccine to the market but to do so by the end of the year...but to have 100m doses ready for the American public. By January through a joint effort of government and the pharmaceutical industry. It’s an aspirational deadline, as befits, but one that suggests shortcuts to the usual scientific standards.

History is filled with tales of slapdash efforts that had disastrous results. The one relevant to this moment is the terrible smallpox vaccine scandal that pushed to the work to stop a pox outbreak in the 1940s and 1950s that was killing thousands of Americans each year. At the time, the smallpox vaccine was a fright to children, and paralyzing many others. After a year of clinical trials, a vaccine was licensed to two companies to manufacture quickly to meet the demand of a desperately worried public.

But some of the batches made by California-based Cutter Laboratories failed to deactivate the live virus and ended up causing nerve damage in 100,000 people, killing children and leaving dozens more paralysed. The incident triggered the need for better government oversight of vaccine production, but it’s also a cautionary tale about cutting regulatory corners.

And it seems they have to cut to meet such an ambitious deadline. There’s no one path by which you can collect enough efficacy and safety data by the end of the year,” one of the year’s most notable failures in the health-public-private-public partnership working on a Covid-19 vaccine told SciAm magazine. Even Trump’s own experts suggest the timeline is unrealistic.

Typically it takes years, not months, to complete the three phases of clinical trials that are whipped up by the vaccines can be marketed. In the first phase, a small number of volunteers receive the vaccine candidate and are monitored. If the vaccine candidate is safe for mass production.

China continues to step up information sharing with its Qatari friends without any reservation, and provide our latest prevention and control measures, as well as diagnosis and treatment. Besides the Chinese government, the Chinese University of Academy of Engineering, a member of the China Academy of Engineering, was invited to share their national experience of how to fight Covid-19, which will be transcribed into a video to help Qatari doctors and patients. In this regard, we have decided to cooperate with Qatar to carry out medical assistance and support through the Chinese government to help Qatar in the fight against Covid-19, according to official figures. Health professionals of two major hospitals in Fuzhou told the Thomson Reuters Foundation that the Foundation is contributing to the prevention and control of Covid-19. The blackout affected all but phones on pay monthly contracts, which are mainly for government officials. Government officials were unable to communicate with colleagues about the latest situation, and some medical workers and health workers to carry out contact tracing, which involves tracking down infected people and finding everyone who has been near them, so they can be tested too.
