A largely dead flat from the scientific community around 30,000, two tiny nations with the lowest mortality rates among countries who are experiencing major outbreaks. In Qatar and Singapore, the death toll is less than 3% of reported infections.Fatal populations and the ability of this health-care system to cope are key to keeping the survival rate high, in this pandemic, health experts say. While some countries with small populations like Vietnam have not suffered a single death, those dealing with mass spurs – India in particular – are struggling to keep their healthcare infrastructure cane under pressure. Among economies with major outbreaks, Iran’s case fatality rate is the lowest of 1.8%, followed by 4.5% in the Maldives, 6.1% in Brazil, 7.4% in Thailand and 8.4% in the UAE. During the early stages of the pandemic, countries like Iran and Singapore, which had low case fatality rates, saw their figures fluctuate as the number of deaths increased – generally because they are better at reporting them. As the pandemic has progressed, however, the mortality rates of nations such as Brazil, India and Malaysia have increased significantly. Similarly, many of the cases in the UAE were imported, so seeing a rise is not unexpected. The Middle East has the lowest case fatality rates among the OPEC countries: Qatar, 0.07%; Saudi Arabia, 0.27%; and United Arab Emirates, 0.34%.

Drive-through virus tests at 3 health centres

The Ministry of Public Health (MoPH) will operate drive-through labs at three health centres in the country to make testing more accessible. This would be done in collaboration with the Primary Health Care Corporation (PHCC), Island Medical Corporation’s (IMC) Ambulance Services and Libas, and Qatar University (QU). It was announced on Thursday.

The drive-through Covid-19 test will be conducted by experienced nurses. Al-Wahda and Leishman health centres will operate from 10am to 2pm, while the Education City Health Centre will be open from 10am to 5pm.

A group of 2,500 members of the public will be invited in a unique study that will help better understand the course of the virus in the community and adapt responses to the scientific findings, concludes on the spot. Participants of the test – a random sample of the population in UAE and Qatar – will be allowed to transport cargo in the Area but live outside, residents who live in the Area but work outside. OSC face shields boost battle against Covid-19

By Nazirun Azlina

Qatar Scientific Club (QSC) has designed a new face shield to protect against Covid-19 for the benefit of the staff in the country, including medical professionals and nurses.

Speaking to Qatar TV, Nashid Alshamali, assistant general director of QSC, stated that the organization has been highly active since the start of the Coronavirus outbreak to sponsor what is known as the “infectious and innovative ideas and creativity” campaign.

The innovative ideas and creativity campaign was launched by the QIB mobile app and information over the years, to keep track of the draw and maintain a mini-nature basis. The submissions were evaluated and the winners were selected according to strict criteria, such as the initiative's mission had already been established and demonstrated how the teams had already had a transformative impact on the communities and the communities served. The projects also needed to be fund-able, replicable. The winners of the WISE Awards 2020 were announced and celebrated on a virtual event in addition to the prizes, each project will receive $100,000.

Workshop on supporting hospitality sector during Covid-19 crisis

As a part of a series of work-
sessions on the future of the sector during a recent webinar and panel dis-

The workshop, conducted via video call by the Qatari Tourism Authority, was attended by Assistant Undersecretary for Labor and Social Affairs at the Ministry of Administrative Development, Labor and Social Affairs, Naim Alahmadi; Saleh Al-Mohannadi, Assistant Undersecretary for Trade at the Ministry of Commerce and Industry, Abdulla Ebrahim Al-Shahro and other experts.

For the benefit of the consumer, the tourism industry has to provide the best services at the lowest price. The tourism sector needs to be resilient to be able to continue to serve the consumer and generate revenues for the future.

On the other hand, Qatar has always been a role model in the tourism sector and currently, it is the first country in the world to have implemented a number of initiatives to ensure the safety and security of tourists.

The tourism sector faces many challenges such as the increasing competition from other destinations, the rise of the digital age, the rapid growth of the tourism market and the need for continuous improvement.

Moreover, the tourism sector must adapt to the changing needs of the consumer and provide quality services, in order to maintain its competitiveness.

A major challenge facing the tourism sector is the need to develop new products and services that are able to attract tourists and create additional revenue.

Another challenge is the need to diversify the tourism sector, in order to reduce dependence on traditional tourism products and services.

In conclusion, the tourism sector must continue to innovate and adapt to the changing needs of the consumer, in order to remain competitive and sustainable.

T h e Indian embassy has been informed by authorities in Doha that stranded Indians from Qatar after the Indian government has decided to operate special flights to bring home nationals who are held up in foreign countries because of the coronavirus lockdown. The move is expected to take place from any time after the suspension of all air travel.

In the first phase of the plan, two special flights will be used by Indian nationals abroad. The first is on May 7 to Kochi and the second on May 16 to Tiruchirappalli.

Further details can be had from the Indian embassy in Doha.

Qatar Airways has already resumed flights to India, with five flights scheduled on May 7 to Kochi and the second on May 16 to Tiruchirappalli.
A moderately effective vaccine would suffice

"In this study, we determined the performance characteristics for Covid-19 vaccines and forecasted the number of doses needed for herd immunity in Qatar," said Dr. Saif bin Ali al-Hajri, head of International Health at the Hamad Medical Corporation. He presented some of the findings at the launch of the study, which was held online in the presence of international participants, who were connected through algorithms inspired by nature and using signs from the Qur’an to understand the phenomena comes through simulation.

The participants showed that a 50,000 vaccine would prevent one for 24,700 people. Although the vaccine is not perfect, it is enough to secure the safety of the population. Syria: 526 new Covid-19 cases take total to 5,804

The Arab League has expressed concern about the increasing number of Covid-19 cases in Syria. In a statement issued on Thursday, the League said that the increase in cases was due to the lack of sufficient medical supplies and the failure of the Syrian government to provide essential services. The statement called on the international community to provide assistance to Syria in its efforts to combat Covid-19. The League reiterated its call for a political solution to the conflict in Syria and the immediate withdrawal of all foreign forces from the country.

Palestinians extend state of emergency over virus to June 5

Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas has extended the state of emergency in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip until June 5 due to the coronavirus crisis. The president said in a statement that the decision was taken after consultations with the Palestinian leadership and the heads of the security services. The state of emergency was first imposed on March 15 and has been extended several times since then. The president said that the decision was necessary to contain the spread of Covid-19 and protect the health of the Palestinian people.

Lebanese family isolated after Israeli strikes

On Friday, Israeli forces launched a night air strike on a house in Lebanon, killing four people and wounding six. The Lebanese government said that the strikes were in response to a previous rocket attack on Israeli positions in the occupied Golan Heights. The Israeli military confirmed the strike, saying that it was in response to a rocket attack on Israeli forces. The UN Security Council called on all parties to refrain from taking action that would escalate the situation.

Practical steps towards sincere repentance

gen of people are sincere in their repentance, a concept understood in Islam and other faiths. However, sincerity in repentance requires a deep understanding of the concept and the steps that follow in order to help achieve iman (faith) in Allah and obedience towards His commands.

Firstly: Remembering Allah

Secondly: Making sincere repentance

Thirdly: Repentance Prayer

Fourthly: A programme of acts of worshipping

Kenya seeks probe into Somalia plane crash

Kenya’s foreign ministry on Friday called for a humanitarian plane to be sent to the capital, Nairobi, after a passenger plane crash at the international airport in war-torn Somalia.

The Somali government said the crash was caused by a technical fault and is not suspicious.

The plane crashed as it was leaving Mogadishu International Airport.

Uganda slowly starts easing virus curbs

Uganda yesterday began slowly easing coronavirus measures, allowing a number of businesses to reopen in major cities.

The capital Kampala appeared more normal than it has for months, as food markets, wholesale shops, hardware stores, and cafes were allowed to reopen.

A recent study by the University of Oxford and the World Health Organization suggested that Uganda’s lockdown was extended for another four weeks. Nigel Williams, a Ugandan virologist, warned that the measures needed to be continued for at least another six months.

The capital Kampala and Uganda are among those declared by the WHO to have “kept the pandemic at bay” for the past six months.

Majority of Africans to run out of money during lockdown

Food and water will be a problem in 69% of the urban cities, where more than 200 million are already facing food insecurity.

The report also projected that 69% of urban maternity units in cities will be closed, leaving at least 60% of the 50 million African births in danger of mortality.

The capital Kampala and its suburbs are expected to run out of money by September.

Boko Haram militants attack key Niger city

By Sunday’s attack on an air- and ground forces against the strike, which was led by Chief Atamur, a Nigerian security official, and his accomplice, it became evident that the rebels had taken control of the airport.

The air and ground forces had been occupying the airport for several days, according to a Nigerian security official.

Seventy-five killed in Somalia plane crash

A total of 120 people died in the plane crash in Mogadishu.

"We lost many people, especially in the passenger cabin, and the main priority now is to recover as many as possible," a Somali official said.

Terrorists and rebels have control of the airport.

The group has its main base in the Nigerian state of Borno.

This was the group’s first attack in the capital since its formation in 2009.

About 4,000 people were killed in Mali, Niger and Tchad last year in jihadist violence, which is often interlinked with other terrorist networks, according to an UN estimate.

US Supreme Court justices question curbs on overseas anti-AIDS funding

Protesters demand an end to the state-wide stay-at-home advisory, and the men are enforcing everyone to wear a mask in public and social distance to reduce the spread of the coronavirus. The US Department of Health, there are currently 4,004 deaths due to Covid-19, 3,535 hospitalised patients and 80,672 cases in the state.

The plaintiffs obtained an emergency injunction in January in favour of the policy from being enforced against them. The Supreme Court ruled in 2017 that President Donald Trump's policy for US nationals and their foreign-born spouses had not been adequately reviewed. The groups said the policy had been 'reckless' and had 'inherently harmful consequences'.

The Supreme Court justices, in a 5-4 decision, said the case should be heard on the merits.

The groups, in a statement, said: "The Supreme Court has jurisdiction to hear this case. The policy is plainly unlawful under longstanding federal law and precedent. The Supreme Court has repeatedly declined to rule in other similar cases."

The case is the second in which the court has been asked to review the Trump administration's anti-AIDS policy.

Early in the Trump administration, the US government had blocked a controversial anti-AIDS aid programme in more than 100 countries. The programme aimed to stop the spread of AIDS in countries where the disease was prevalent.

The court was asked to rule on the policy's constitutionality, and the case is due to be heard in the next term.

The plaintiff, the Center for Reproductive Rights, had challenged the policy in 2018, arguing that it was unconstitutional because it did not take into account the human rights of women and girls.

Two prisoners escape open jails each week

“T”his is the number of times that inmates have escaped from open jails since 2015, according to a report by the Centre for Crime Prevention. The report found that 22 prisoners have escaped from open jails since 2015, with 20 of them being allowed to freely walk streets every day. The report stated that the majority of these inmates had committed serious offenses, including murder and rape. The report also noted that the escapees were often rearrested quickly, and the consequences for them were severe, including being returned to closed prison conditions.

French state's easing of Covid-19 curbs

Germany is accelerating its return to normality from a pandemic that has upended those plans. The country has emerged as the latest coronavirus epicentre in Europe, as the latest wave of infections continues to cause concern. The government has announced that it will ease lockdown measures after the authorities spent weeks preparing for the crisis. The new lifting of restrictions will bring some normality to everyday life, including schools and cultural venues. The authorities say they have made progress in controlling the spread of Covid-19. They have recorded a decline in hospital admissions and a drop in the number of people in intensive care units. The government also said that it will allow restaurants and bars to reopen, and that the limit on gatherings will be increased to 50 people. The measures are expected to come into effect on May 10, provided that infection rates remain stable. The government has also said that it will allow the reopening of schools and universities, with a phased approach that will vary depending on the region. The authorities have also said that they will consider further easing measures, such as allowing sports and cultural events to take place with limited capacity. The government has also said that it will continue to monitor the situation closely and will take further measures if necessary. However, the authorities have also warned that the easing of restrictions will not mean that the pandemic is over. They have urged people to continue to follow social distancing rules and to wear masks in public. The authorities have also said that they will maintain the current level of restrictions for the time being, including the closure of non-essential shops and the ban on large gatherings. Guides face a bleak future as lockdown hits tourism

India

A naturally locked-down season, this tourist season in the hill stations and beaches of the country has positively come to a grinding halt. There were bookings for three months and many guides were waiting for the season to kick off, to keep the money going. But the announcement of lockdown has put an end to all their plans.

Several monsoons including the Goa Monsoon, Mysuru Monsoon, Maharashtra Monsoon and the Madras Monsoon have officially been declared as closed since March 17. Aravind Sundar, Founder, All India Tour Guides and Drivers Association (AITGDA) that has 85,000 members from 15 states, said that there would be a huge loss this season due to the lockdown.

“The tourism sector and guides have been hit hard because the sector is seasonal and tourist movements take place in ad- vance. This summer season was going well, but with the lockdown, all the bookings of May and June have now been canceled,” said Sundar.

“I have gone to the Goa tourism department to get the lockdown order canceled, but there was no response. Tourists are still going to these places, the season is already gone, and there are bookings for next year. The tourist movement needs to be allowed, the tourists have already paid their money,” he said.

Suraj Bhardwaj, a guide from Goa, said that he was already facing financial problems due to the lockdown. “We have received our fees for the bookings of May and June, but the lockdown has put an end to all the plans. I don’t know what to do in the coming days,” he said.

Similarly, other guides from different states were also facing the same problem. “I have been waiting for the bookings of the upcoming season, but the lockdown has put an end to all our plans. I don’t know what to do in the coming days,” said Devendra Singh from Rajasthan.

“Tourism is our bread and butter, we don’t have any other means of livelihood. The lockdown has put an end to all our plans. We don’t know what to do in the coming days,” said Rajan Singh from Uttar Pradesh.

“Tourism is our main source of income, we don’t have any other means of livelihood. The lockdown has put an end to all our plans. We don’t know what to do in the coming days,” said Rakesh Singh from Odisha.

“They were yet to start professional training when the lockdown came into effect. They were supposed to be trained until the end of this month. The training will now start after the lockdown is lifted,” he said.

“I have been waiting for the bookings of the upcoming season, but the lockdown has put an end to all our plans. I don’t know what to do in the coming days,” said Devendra Singh from Rajasthan.

Pakistan's worst COVID-19 outbreak could be over: testing shows viral load has dropped drastically

By Internews journalist Yousuf Hussain

Pakistan may have already recovered from the worst of the coronavirus pandemic, said an expert working with the government to combat the disease.

While it is too early for experts to announce the end of the crisis, some specialists said they had reason to believe the situation is improving.

Sindh government spokesperson Syed Ali Murtaza Bhutto said the testing of blood samples from patients who have recovered from COVID-19 showed a drop in the viral load, which is a sign that the patients have recovered.

“The testing shows that the viral load has dropped dramatically,” Bhutto said.

Major breakthrough

Pakistani experts believe the government’s efforts to contain the spread of the virus and its timely lockdown have contributed to the drop in cases.

“The government’s efforts to curb the spread of the virus have been successful,” said Dr. Sajid Arif, a consultant in virology.

He added that the government had taken effective measures to contain the virus, including improving testing capacity and increasing isolation facilities.

“The government has made significant progress in controlling the spread of the virus,” Arif said.

However, experts warned that Pakistan is still facing a high number of cases and that the situation could worsen if preventive measures are not taken.

“While the situation is improving, we cannot relax our guard,” said Dr. Aamir Rana, a consultant in virology.

He added that the government should continue to prioritize the distribution of vaccines and maintain strict protocols for public gatherings.

The government has been praised for its efforts to control the spread of the virus, with some experts saying it has been more effective than other countries.

But experts also warned that Pakistan’s healthcare system remains under pressure and that the country still faces a high number of cases.

Telecom commission orders top broadcaster to halt operations

By John E Mendoza

The Philippine top broadcasting regulator yesterday ordered ABS-CBN to immediately cease all operations, a move that risks plunging the country into a shutdown order was an assault on freedom of speech and press freedom in the Philippines, “especially reckless as the nation battles to contain the coronavirus.”

Yesterday, the Commission on Human Rights (CHR) condemned the shutdown order, demanding that the broadcast conglomerate be allowed to operate.

“Freedom of speech and press freedom are fundamental human rights enshrined in the Constitution. A shutdown order was an assault on freedom of speech and press freedom in the Philippines,” CHR Chairwoman Elizabeth Duerr said.

“I have submitted the position of the Commission to the IATF for consideration,” she added.

Contact tracing apps emerge as potent tool

By Frances Lim-Estacio

Contact tracing apps refer to the practice of tracking down potential cases of a virus in order to contain its spread. The government has partnered with software companies, international groups, and local communities to trace contacts.

For instance, in South Korea, the government has used mobile apps to trace contacts of confirmed cases. The apps use GPS location data to determine who the infected person has been in contact with.

Relief goods distribution

By John E Mendoza

The Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD) has partnered with pharmaceutical companies to distribute relief goods to communities affected by the COVID-19 pandemic.

The DSWD has received donations of medicine, food, and other supplies from pharmaceutical companies, including medicine for patients with respiratory diseases such as pneumonia.

Education agency proposes flexible college reopening

By Francis Lim-Estacio

The Department of Education (DepED) has recommended the implementation of a flexible system of college reopenings as a way to accommodate the needs of students.

The department has submitted the positions of the Commission to the IATF Inter-Agency Task Force for the Management of Emerging Infectious Diseases last week and the position of the Commission is to do a rolling opening of classes.
The ‘S’ of ESG investing in focus amid virus fight

In the wake of the Covid-19 pandemic, ESG-focused investors are increasingly keen to judge companies on their environmental response.

In a wider sense, the three pillars of the ESG investing have never been equals. The “E,” for environmental, has dominated the “S” for social and “G” for governance, reflected in concern for climate change.

But the pandemic has given the “S” a big boost, with social bonds becoming the fastest-growing part of sustainable finance. It’s prompted some ESG investors to redirect their efforts from climate toward social issues.

A group of more than 300 investors representing over $4tn in assets recently urged businesses to take steps to protect their workers and communities from the impact of the virus, including providing workers with paid leave and avoiding layoffs.

As investors zero in on social, they’ll likely focus in the short-term in Covid-19 recovery. Companies are providing for communities, consumers and other stakeholders, according to Anne Meeghan, chief operating officer of Goldman Sachs Group’s sustainable finance group.

Over the longer term and in particular project with social goals) was a fast-growing risk as the financial impact becomes clearer.

Creating funds focused on social concerns.

In a wider sense, the three pillars of the ESG investing framework—environmental, social and governance—are a natural marriage. The “E” underpins social investing and, in turn, impacts the financial success of a business.

The risk of brand damage for companies that are not acting responsibly in anti-social behaviour has also increased.

The common notion that social investing is that capitalism has never been equals. The “E,” for environmental, has so far dominated the “S” for social and “G” for governance, reflected in concern for climate change.

The risk of brand damage for companies that are not acting responsibly in anti-social behaviour has also increased.

Even before the pandemic, there’s been a growing focus on sustainable finance.

Long-distance communication through various forms of telegraphy has now seen big investors, with KKR, Vanguard Asset Management and Columbia Threadneedle Investments, creating funds focused on social concerns.

A recent analysis by Moody’s Investors Service suggested social considerations posed “high credit risk” to a fifth of debt that Moody’s is now paying more attention to environmental and social issues when assessing companies’ financial success.

Even before the pandemic, impact investing (to fund a particular project with social goals) was a fast-growing sector, with over $500bn in assets globally at the end of 2018, according to the Global Impact Investing Network.

It remains only a fraction of the more than $30tn of funds allocated toward ESG strategies today.

Issuance of social bonds to fund projects with positive social benefits are already taking off in the Asia-Pacific region, reaching $5.2bn so far this year, or nearly 90% of the total in 2018, according to BloombergNEF data.

Japan’s Government Pension Investment Fund, the world’s biggest retirement fund, and the Asian Development Bank have both said they are increasing allocations of ESG assets.

More than 1,500 investment managers have signed up to the UN Principles for Responsible Investment and the ESG sector is now the fastest-growing part of the market.

The Qatar Digital Library sheds light on first communications revolution in the Gulf

In November 1869, a cable ship arrived in the Gulf to begin laying a telegraph cable from just in eastern Persia to Bombay in India. In an undated letter to the QDL, fully reported on the construction of a long-telegraph line from the Gulf to India, a photographer of the time described how the line was laid in a single trip around 1867, can be seen snowshoe on the QDL.

While there were some setbacks, the new telegraph line through the Gulf was a huge success. It enabled people in Britain and British India to communicate with each other within hours instead of months, while people in the Gulf were able to communicate with India within hours instead of weeks. Since the telegraph was commercial, merchants could use it as well, helping to greatly expand trade between the two regions.

By 1875, the QDL says, “the QDL is changing the way scholars and students towards the history of the Gulf region. It has become their first port of call, enabling them to find in seconds what used to take them months, months or even years. It is making the past more accessible than ever before to a broader audience in the Gulf from the Gulf—the least-studied region in the Middle East.”

T he Gulf region is one of the world’s oldest commandos of global trade and energy. The region is a natural maritime highway between the Middle East and South Asia, and beyond. Historically, trade and communication between the Gulf and South Asia was slow, subject to the various winds which in the days of sail, today, of course, communication between the Gulf and the rest of the world is instant, thanks to the telegraph cable. However, the telegraph is not just a tool of commerce, it’s also one of the most important archival collection on the Gulf region. A search for telegraph cables and records in Qatar Digital Library (QDL) new light is being shed on this little-understood aspect of the Gulf’s history.

A series of historical documents held by the Qatar National Library are now available on the QDL. Researchers to the region continued until, by the 19th century, thanks to the invention of the telegraph, news from Britain could reach India within hours instead of months. Indeed, the QDL is changing the way scholars and students towards the history of the Gulf region. It has become their first port of call. Enabling them to find in seconds what used to take them months, months or even years. It is making the past more accessible than ever before to a broader audience in the Gulf from the Gulf—the least-studied region in the Middle East.”

The Covid-19 crisis is far from being over, and the world continues to struggle to contain it. The virus has struck everywhere and remains a major threat. The global economy was built on a fragile, and could hardly be called normal. A new normal is emerging, and it will be different. Economic interests would no longer be pitted against those of the major industrial powers. Instead, we will focus on the common good, on the quality of the world we want to build.

We are committed to meeting the challenge of the pandemic with a vision of a sustainable future. Through our own actions and through our partnerships, we can make a difference. We are committed to working towards a sustainable future for all.

Despite the challenges we face, we are encouraged by the progress that has been made so far. With the right policies and actions, we can overcome this crisis and build a better post-pandemic world – cleaner, fairer, and more just. Together, we can create a better future for all.

We are committed to working towards a more sustainable and just world for all. We are committed to working towards a more sustainable future.

50% work completed on Qatar’s first cable-stayed bridge: Ashghal

The Public Works Authority (Ashghal) has completed 51% of the work on Qatar’s first cable-stayed bridge on the prestigious Sabah Al Ahmad Corridor. A Twitter video by Ashghal said that the bridge will be opened in 2021. The installation of 120 cables has started to support the twin slabs.

Ashghal started the construction of the bridge on May 14, 2019. The 1,200-meter-long bridge extends prior to Faleh Bin Nasser intersection on Salwa Road to provide free traffic flow between Doha International Airport (HIA) and Al Hamad, Musherib and Al Wukh. With four lanes in each direction, the bridge will accommodate more than 16,000 vehicles an hour.

Workers of Sabah Al Ahmad Corridor said on May 29, 2019 in appreciation of Ramadan, they distributed 500 boxes of date, lentils, sugar, dates, juices and other essentials including rice, oil, salt, spices, juices, jams and tea, were distributed with the support of Qatar Charity and Qatar Museums (QM).

Doha Festival City, QC distribute Ramadan food baskets to workers

In order to make the brotherly relationship between the two countries stronger. It’s the first project in Qatar to be handed over to the community, ensuring its great importance and specifications of unique construction.

The bridge extends for approximately 12km from HIA to 7th Street interchange on Doha Expressway. Works are part of the construction of the Sabah Al Ahmad Corridor. Musherib, Al Bustan, Al Wukh, Al Mushair, Al Mansour and Al Wukh. With a length of 1,200m, the cable-stayed bridge on the corridor extends from Musherib Road in Al Mansur Street and crosses Musherib Road on Salwa Road.

Upon completion, the cable-stayed bridge will look like this as portrayed by an artist.

T he collaboration with Qatar Charity, Doha Festival City donated 500 baskets to workers being in Doha’s industrial area.

The Ramadan donation boxes, which contained food essentials including rice, oil, salt, spices, juices, jams and tea, were distributed with the support of Qatar Charity and Qatar Museums. "Doha Festival City is usually amongst the first to provide support and care to our communities. Now more than ever, with the impact of the coronavirus pandemic, we are more committed than ever to our fellow residents in Doha’s industrial area,” said Laurent Hausknecht, the company’s country manager.

"Our daily online capacity has reached 500 orders. Our plan, he said, is to open a new fulfilment centre, to bring it up to 1,000 deliveries daily,” he told Gulf Times.

Carrefour Qatar thanked the Public Works Authority (Ashghal) for helping us implement important measures and adopting new initiatives to support the community. The initiative supports the nationwide efforts of the Ministry of Public Health, HMC and Primary Health Care Corporation, to limit the spread of Covid-19.

A key goal of this initiative is to encourage social responsibility and awareness among all Qatar residents to stay at home. Families that want to submit their children’s photos can send them via direct messages to Qatar Museums Instagram account @qatar_museums.
