MoC sets prices of basic commodities

The Ministry of Commerce and Industry (MoCI) has announced that it has determined the maximum prices of more than 3,000 basic commodities, such as vegetables, fruits, and others. Beginning other than the MoCI will be subject to a fine of QR2,236,827. The MoCI clarified that it determined to adhere to and consumers should cross-check the price and quality of different items in such places and take the necessary decisions accordingly. The ministry stated that the list has been distributed through a statement on Twitter yesterday, which will support the government’s efforts to regulate the prices of basic commodities and ensure the MoCI’s role in controlling commodity prices.

The ministry has urged people to report any violations seen to its various governmental channels, the commerce police, and social media channels.

The price of basic commodities such as vegetables, fruits, and others was clarified in a list on the MoCI’s website at https://www.moci.gov.qa.

Kahramaa runs conservation contest

The Qatar General Electric & Water Corporation (Kahramaa) launched a competition for government employees at its headquarters in Qatar to continue this collaboration with Kahramaa and to promote the concept of sustainability in the community. The competition is being organized nominally in view of the current Covid-19 pandemic and as part of the precautionary measures in place to prevent the spread of the virus. Kahramaa has launched its competition, named “Kahramaa Sustainability in Action Competition”, to bring the concept of sustainability closer to government employees. Kahramaa employees will be asked to adopt energy-efficient habits and behaviors, such as using natural light, turning off lights and electronic devices, using public transportation, and reducing waste. The competition aims to promote sustainability and encourage government employees to adopt sustainable practices in their daily lives. The competition is open to all employees of the government of Qatar and will run until the end of the year. The winners of the competition will be announced in early January 2021.

EU sees ‘new hope’ for Libya with truce

The European Union said yesterday that Libya was “one step forward” towards a political solution to its civil war, after a surprise announcement of a truce by its feuding sides. The EU diplomatic chief Josep Borrell said the announcement “demonstrates a constructive first step forward”.

The announcement “alone is not enough” and “leaders need to overcome the current stalemate and create a new hope for a common general formula to a political solution in the longstanding Libyan crisis and the temptation of a military solution from all the parties involved throughout the country”, he said. “A new narrative among adversaries is needed to establish a permanent ceasefire and a breakthrough,” he said.

The EU sees “new hope” over south-eastern Libya where the “state of insurgency” in the country’s south-eastern is “coming to an end”, he said. The announcement, he said, showed “a fair and transparent distribution mechanism of dialogue to be only possible on a clear economic and financial institutions”.

California seeks help on blazes

The LNU fire covered 314,207 acres in the western US, making it the second-largest fire this year. About 119,000 people have been evacuated from their homes as inclement weather continues to)+45

The two largest blazes – the LNU fire, including Napa and Sonoma counties, and the SCU Lightning complex in the northern end of the state – have burned over 761,000 acres. The bites have blazed through some of California’s most popular nature reserves, including those in Sonoma and Napa counties, which are surrounded by millions of acres of rural land.

“The western US and Great Plains are under a vast amount of smoke and are suffering as a result,” said John V. S. Kenneth, a researcher at the University of Wisconsin, Madison.

“With nearly 90% of homes identified on satellite or aerial imagery, the impacts are widespread, and the fires are likely to continue for weeks or months.”

The US House of Representatives is considering an emergency bill dubbed the “December is widely expected to pass an emergency bill that would increase the fire prevention grants to $8.5 billion, up from $2.8 billion. The bill would also provide funds for the National Park Service and the Forest Service to improve their firefighting capabilities.

The bill’s passage would provide much-needed resources to state and local officials who are battling the blazes, which have already claimed the lives of four people.

The bill’s passage would also help ensure that the US Forest Service and the National Park Service are able to effectively manage the blazes, which have already burned more than 761,000 acres.

The bill’s passage would also help ensure that the federal government is able to effectively manage the blazes, which have already burned more than 761,000 acres.

Germany sees highest virus spike since April

The number of new coronavirus cases in Germany has spiked for the first time in months, with infections rising to levels last seen in the wake of the country’s peak in the spring.

Germany’s health ministry said 10,574 new coronavirus cases were recorded on Friday, the highest daily increase since April 25, when Germany reported 10,775 infections.

The ministry added that 108 people had died in the past 24 hours, bringing the total number of deaths from the virus to 27,389.

The rise in infections comes amid concerns about a potential second wave of the pandemic, with other European countries also seeing increases in cases.

“Freedom to Furgal” and “Belarus – Khabarovsk is not on fire!”

People marched with posters yesterday with the words “Freedom to Furgal” and “Belarus – Khabarovsk is not on fire!” during a protest in Khabarovsk.

His supporters say the detention is politically-motivated.

Opposition politician Sergei Furgal was arrested in Khabarovsk on August 7 and charged with multiple murders dating back to his time as the regional governor.

Furgal, 58, has denied the charges which he denies.

Furgal was the most popular candidate in Khabarovsk, a district in Russia’s Far Eastern federal district, where he had been governor since 2010.

Rome’s Spallanzani Hospital, Italy’s biggest specialist hospital for bacterial infections, told Italian media that “the virus is about to break in the country and that the virus is already widespread.”

The Italian government has warned that the virus is spreading faster than expected, and has imposed new restrictions on gatherings.

The government has also announced a new national curfew from 11pm to 5am.

A BBC spokesperson said: “No one is safe. It’s comedy that requires real empathy.”

The programme, which is in its second series, has been described as “a celebration of some of the most hard-to-watch sketches”.

Protesters hold seventh anti-Kremlin march over governor

The number of anti-Kremlin protesters seeking the release of a governor arrested in Siberia has reached seven.

Residents of Khabarovsk, 6.300 kilometers (4,000 miles) east of Moscow, have been protesting against the arrest of Sergei Furgal, who was governor of the Khabarovsk region, a federal district in southeastern Russia.

Furgal, 58, was arrested on August 7 and charged with multiple murders dating back to his time as the regional governor.

The protest is part of a broader wave of protests against Russian President Vladimir Putin’s government, which has faced criticism for its handling of the coronavirus pandemic.

Putin has cracked down on protests, including those targeting the arrest of Furgal.

The protests have sparked concerns about the potential for violence, with security forces stepping up their presence to prevent unrest.

However, the protests have also highlighted民众对政府处理疫情方式的不满。

Mid-east aviation seeks critical relief for restart

The impact on the Middle East aviation industry and on economies caused by the shutdown of air traffic due to the Covid-19 pandemic has deepened over the last few weeks. GDP support for aviation and related industries in the Middle East region could fall by up to $58bn, data provided by International Air Transport Association (IATA) shows.

The latest assessment from IATA Economics shows that the outlook at the national level has worsened for major aviation markets in the Middle East this June. For example, the passenger numbers, jobs at risk and GDP impacts for the few biggest Middle East markets all have declined. Job losses in aviation and related industries could grow to 1.5mn in the region. That is more than half of the region’s 2.4mn aviation-related employment and 105,000 more than the previous estimate.

Full-year 2020 traffic is expected to plummet by 56% compared to 2019. Previous estimate was a fall of 51%. To minimise the impacts of lockdown and travel restrictions, airlines in the Middle East region need critical relief to cover their fixed costs of operations and to sustain their capacity.

In particular, the Middle East region’s aviation industry seeks direct financial aid such as wage subsidies and loans, an extension of the waiver on slot rule, and relief from taxes and charges. Some governments in the Middle East have provided certain relief to aviation. However, the situation is at different stages, experts say and urge governments need to continue applying relief measures amid unpredictable demand patterns.

Job losses in aviation and related industries could grow to 1.5mn in the region

Harmonising the restart of aviation across the region is the region’s top priority. According to Mohamed al-Bakri, IATA’s regional vice president Middle East, it is imperative that the region restart safely as soon as possible.

Without air connectivity being restored, the socio-economic impact will only get worse.

On August 13, the OECD signed that it would be revising its 2020 real (inflation-adjusted) GDP forecast for the South Korean economy to -0.8%, adding to the confidence that the country is facing a recession compared to 2019. Previous estimate was a fall of -0.8%. W orse, this news came just in the wake of the world’s second wave of the virus.

That said, this news shouldn’t have come as a shock to anyone. On May 26, the government reported around 1,900 new cases of Covid-19, following previous forecasts that the US economy was on track to contract by 11.5% overall this year. Forecasts are only forecasts, and the OECD’s verdict is no better or worse than other official versions of a world economy on the verge of a recession.

Still, for the purposes of making cross-country comparisons, the OECD’s GDP forecast offers a comprehensive snapshot of the world’s economic declines, and it is expected that global output figures in 2020 will turn out to be lower than many expected. For example, it estimated that GDP will fall by 3.3% in the US in the second quarter of 2020, and by 6.8% in the UK. OECD’s forecast is in contrast, South Korea’s 2020 contraction is nothing compared to what the country experienced during the 1998 Asian financial crisis.

Back in March, many responded with买了 stock questions for the fact that the US was just two weeks behind Italy, making almost no mention of South Korea. In the event, both help and hindrances of the South Korean economy to recover from the Covid-19 crisis have become model for other countries to emulate.

Prime minister criticises new airport

The prime minister, in a recent interview, expressed concern over the progress of the new airport in Islamabad. He said the government was committed to completing the airport on time, but the progress was slow and the project was facing several challenges.

The prime minister also pointed out that the project was facing issues related to funding, land acquisition, and environmental clearances. He added that the government was working closely with the relevant authorities to resolve these issues and complete the project as soon as possible.

The prime minister emphasized that the new airport was a key component of Pakistan's efforts to improve its connectivity with the rest of the world. He said the airport would play a crucial role in boosting tourism and attracting foreign investment.

The prime minister also highlighted the importance of the airport for Pakistan's aviation sector. He said the airport would provide much-needed relief to Pakistan's existing airports and improve the country's air connectivity.

The prime minister's comments come at a time when Pakistan is facing increasing competition in the aviation sector. Several countries in the region, including India, have recently opened new airports or announced plans to expand existing ones.

The prime minister's remarks reflect the government's commitment to completing the airport project. The government has been working closely with the relevant authorities to resolve the issues facing the project and ensure its timely completion.
