PM launches Qatar Quality Mark

The Prime Minister and Minister of Commerce and Industry Ali bin Ahmed al-Kuwari on Sunday launched the Qatar Quality Mark for national companies.

The Prime Minister and Minister of Commerce and Industry Ali bin Ahmed al-Kuwari launched the Qatar Quality Mark, an initiative by the Ministry of Commerce and Industry to enhance the competitiveness of national goods in the local, regional and global markets and support development plans and strategies.

The programme began with a presentation on the Qatar Quality Mark and its benefits for consumers and enterprises and the mechanisms for confirming the commodity to be approved, as well as an explanation of the approved standards, in addition to increasing competitive opportunities among companies.

The Qatar Quality Mark is a snapshot that certifies the quality of goods, whether produced in Qatar or imported, and is used to advertise the leadership’s commitment to quality in the markets during the period of validity of the license. It is placed on the goods by the methods approved by the organisation.

On the occasion, the Prime Minister and Minister of Commerce and Industry Ali bin Ahmed al-Kuwari said that launching the Qatar Quality Mark was an important step towards promoting the concept of quality and conforming to the specifications approved in the country.

He said: “The Ministry of Commerce and Industry congratulated Al Qafco for Production of Benazocine (Baytex) for obtaining the first Qatar Quality Mark for its products, noting that this is an important achievement in light of the current challenges and calls on the government that the country has been witnessing in the construction sector.

For his part, Chairman of QATAR FMME Enterprises Mohammed bin Abdulaziz bin Mohammed bin Al-Mansour, said that Qatar Quality Mark enhanced the competitiveness of products in the local, regional and global markets.

The representative Cov-19 strain in Qatar is very similar to the strain found in China, both having been confirmed cases of coronavirus in Qatar. This stain has been spread to two other strains: the World Health Organization (WHO) and the World Health Organization (WTO).

Qatar's proactive and extensive measures have been taken to control the spread of the virus and prevent further infections. These measures include regular testing, contact tracing, and isolation of infected individuals. The government has also implemented strict quarantine measures for people arriving from countries with high Covid-19 infection rates.

Covid-19 strain in Qatar is similar to China, India, and Philippines

The Ministry of Public Health (MoPH) has reported that the Covid-19 strain in Qatar is very similar to the strain found in China, India, and Philippines. The MoPH has stated that the strain in Qatar is currently under surveillance and that no new cases have been reported.

The first confirmed case of Covid-19 in Qatar was reported on March 1, 2020. Since then, the country has implemented strict measures to control the spread of the virus. These measures include the closing of schools and universities, the cancellation of large gatherings, and the implementation of social distancing measures.

On May 13, 2020, Qatar became the first country in the world to lift all coronavirus restrictions, allowing people to return to normal activities. However, the country remains on high alert, and strict measures are still being implemented to prevent the spread of the virus.

Conscious parenting: behavioural therapy for a positive change

Parenting, care-giving and education in Qatar are meant to be the best in the region. The idea is to prepare our children for a world of challenges and opportunities. In the wake of the rapid pace of change, it becomes important to ensure that our children are equipped to deal with the challenges that they will face in the future. This is where behavioural therapy comes into play.

Behavioural therapy is a form of therapy that focuses on helping individuals learn new ways of thinking and behaving. It is based on the principles of learning theory and is used to treat a variety of problems, including anxiety, depression, and substance abuse. It can be used with all children, including those with special needs, and it can be adapted to meet the needs of each individual.

The therapy is based on the idea that thoughts and behaviors are interconnected and that changing one can lead to changes in the other. The therapist works with the child and their family to identify problematic behaviors and to develop strategies to help the child overcome them. This can involve setting goals, teaching new skills, and providing support.

A new online course offered by Inner Connection -called ‘From Havoc to Harmony at Home’ - will start its live training sessions (recordings will be available as well) every Friday and Saturday next month (September) and October. The course, dubbed as ‘From Havoc to Harmony at Home’ is a comprehensive PDF with additional resources and workshops to staff in schools to do observations of the children and write extensive reports. These reports, said, clients can discuss their experiences with the therapists and other constructive changes in their behavior patterns. The course is designed to foster a positive change within schools and classrooms. Children develop avoidant behavior symptoms” Carstens added.

“Inner Connection’s model for conscious management is positive and empowering to parents and teachers to manage the situation effectively,” Carstens stressed.

Each training module of ‘From Havoc to Harmony at Home’ has its own specific theme that is presented with various behaviour problems, including anxiety and other symptoms that impede the education of the child and their ability to access the curriculum, as well as the effect these symptoms have on the child’s health, social interaction, behaviourality and prosocial for the benefits of the child. Morocco rejects normalising ties with Israel

Moroccan Prime Minister Saad Dine El Otmani on Sunday rejected any normalisation of relations with Israel.

“Making any normalisation with the Zionist entity because this empties the Moroccan ideal of the region in the Middle East. Rabat suspended relations with East Jerusalem as capital of a Palestinian state. The remarks came ahead of a visit to the region by Jared Kushner, a senior advisor and son to the US President Donald Trump, and after the US and Israel struck a deal to normalise ties with them or manage their behaviour patterns out. This enables the teachers to create harmony at home,” Carstens said.

“I offer coaching consultation and advise on ways to the behaviour problems and normalize the change within schools and classrooms. Conscious Parenting Model to effect a positive change at home,” she said. “This enables the child to access the curriculum, as well as the effect this symptoms have on the child’s health, social interaction, and prosocial skills for the benefits of the child. Residents evacuate as twin storms threaten US coast

The Federal Emergency Management Agency has sent in running at the US coast within days "could result in a prolonged period of hazardous weather" along the coast of the US Gulf of Mexico coast. The potential for flooding and evacuations added to worries about the spread of the coronavirus.

Tulane University, the largest private engineering and science school in the US, will have to make plans to evacuate its students due to forecasted tropical storms Laura and Marco.

The agency is prepared to handle back-to-back storms, said Portland Mayor Ted Wheeler, who has declared a state of emergency for Portland. Residents in Portland were warned to stay out of the water, as the Portland Police Department said there were reports of a "clean-up" happening in the area. The city has seen a significant increase in offshore oil production in recent months, as well as a rise in oil spills in the city's waterways.

In Grand Isle, at the state's southern tip, authorities were placing sandbags to hold back the protective barrier, while a New Orleans, Louisiana, police officer, who was driving through clouds of smoke while dispersing a crowd of protesters in Portland, was shot by a police officer. The police officer was reportedly shot in the arm.

Crackdown on raves ahead of new curbs

Missing school is greater risk to kids than Covid-19

The chief medical officer for the Bahamas has said that the island nation will lift some of its COVID-19 restrictions after the summer holidays, allowing students to return to school.

As of Monday, schools will be open for the first time this year, with students attending class for the first time since the start of the pandemic in March. The minister told the BBC that the decision was taken to allow schools to reopen as soon as possible, given the limited number of cases in the country.

However, he also warned that the situation could change if there are too many new infections. "We are very concerned that if we see a lot of cases in the schools, we may have to close them again," he said.

The minister added that the government is working closely with the education sector to ensure that schools are properly prepared for the return of students.

He also thanked the public for their continued support during the pandemic, saying that it had been "a real team effort to get us through this crisis".

Tougher measures targeting 12-16s as schools reopen

Mr Johnson told a meeting of top health advisers to the government yesterday that schools would be closed from the start of the next term, with students learning from home until February.

He also announced that all non-essential winter sports will be banned, and that all non-essential social gatherings will be restricted to six people or two households.

The prime minister said: "We have to stop the virus overwhelming our hospitals and our NHS, and that means taking tough action now to combat any surge in cases.

"That's why we're imposing tougher measures for the 12-16 age group, as schools reopen in the new year.

"We'll continue to monitor the situation closely, and if we see signs of a second peak developing, we will take swift action to bring it under control."
Navalny under police protection at Berlin hospital

German Interior Minister Horst Seehofer said police had taken Navalny, who was held in Berlin’s Charité hospital, on a tour of the facility and that docking police were on standby should he need them.

The interior ministry said Navalny, 44, had been discharged from the hospital on Wednesday after seeking treatment for his suspected poisoning.

Prime Minister Mikhail Mishustin earlier said Navalny had been headset with a team from the Russian Foreign Ministry in the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation (NATO) council.

A video released by the presidency showed Lukashenko, 66, in a suit and tie, speaking to a TV camera in a conference room.

“Nobody is in charge of the state in Belarus anymore,” the activist told reporters, adding that he was ready to meet with the leader.

“We will not forgive, We will not accept anything,” an activist told the AFP.

The move comes after Lukashenko’s team said the leader had been hospitalized in a Berlin hospital for suspected poisoning.

Navalny said he had been given the antidote to Novichok after being met by his team after landing at the airport.

Navalny was taken in a military aircraft to Berlin’s Charité hospital, where he is being treated for suspected poisoning.

In an interview with AP on Monday, August 24, 2020

The hospital said it had begun taking measures to guard Navalny.

Asam bets on free scooters for top girl students

Delhi's chief minister, Arvind Kejriwal, announced on Twitter that the government is planning to distribute free scooters to top students who perform well in the Delhi board exams.

The move aims to encourage students to pursue higher education and provide them with an additional means of transportation. The government plans to distribute scooters to all top performing students in various categories, including those who achieve high scores in competitive exams.

The announcement has been widely praised by parents and educators, who believe it will help students overcome the financial barrier of accessing higher education.

Bhushan’s contempt case: P缘 Supreme Court on trial

One of India’s most prominent lawyers,footer Bhushan, is facing a contempt case in a case involving the disclosure of confidential information and criticism of the Supreme Court.

Bhushan has been accused of making derogatory remarks about the court and its judges, including Chief Justice S A Bobde, which are alleged to have impugned the court’s integrity.

The Supreme Court ruled that Bhushan’s comments were ‘seditious’. The court ordered him to deposit a fine of Rs 25 lakh, which is a hefty sum given the lawyer’s financial status. Pakistan sanctions militants to avoid-money laundering accusations

Responding to the South Chief minister’s remarks about the action being taken in the grey list, the minister said that Pakistan was committed to take all necessary steps to comply with the recommendations of the FATF.

He added that the government was determined to ensure that the country was not included in the grey list.

The minister further said that the country had made significant progress in implementing the FATF’s recommendations.

He also stated that the government was working closely with the financial sector to ensure that anti-money laundering and反恐怖融资 measures were effectively implemented.

The minister concluded by emphasizing the importance of maintaining a solid financial framework to avoid any negative repercussions.

Sanctions could have severe consequences for the country, he reiterated, and it was crucial to maintain monetary stability and avoid any economic disruptions.

In conclusion, the minister underscored the government’s commitment to upholding international standards and ensuring financial integrity.

Inefficiencies and Challenges in Pakistan’s Infrastructure

Pakistan’s infrastructure, particularly in Karachi, has faced significant challenges. The city, which is the economic hub of the country, has struggled to keep up with the growing population and urbanization.

Karachi Mayor Wasim Akhtar acknowledged the city’s infrastructure problems, stating, “We have been working on resolving these issues, but it is a continuous process.”

The mayor emphasized the need for collaboration between the government, financial institutions, and the private sector to address Karachi’s infrastructure challenges.

Karachi’s gray list status, he added, would push the government to take concrete steps to improve the city’s infrastructure. He further stated that the mayor’s office is working closely with the Planning Commission to prepare a comprehensive development plan for Karachi.

However, Karachi’s residents face several challenges, including inadequate water supply, power outages, and insufficient waste management. The situation is further complicated by the heavy rainfall that has been affecting the city.

The government has been working on various initiatives, including the modernization of Karachi’s infrastructure, to address these issues. However, the challenges are immense, and more efforts are needed to be made.

Karachi, with a population of over 14 million, is grappling with infrastructural inadequacies. The city requires significant investment to ensure sustainable development.

The government has acknowledged the need for structural reforms and has launched various initiatives to improve Karachi’s infrastructure. However, the challenges are complex, and a comprehensive approach is required.

The situation highlights the need for better urban planning and infrastructure development in Pakistan. The government needs to prioritize these areas to ensure a better quality of life for its citizens.

Karachi’s infrastructure needs are immense, and the city requires substantial investment. The government should collaborate with international organizations and the private sector to ensure effective implementation of infrastructure projects.

In conclusion, Karachi’s infrastructure challenges are significant, and the government needs to prioritize these issues to ensure sustainable development. The city’s residents deserve better infrastructure, and the government should take urgent steps to address the challenges.
A ray of hope as world continues to battle Covid-19

What if testing for the novel coronavirus (Covid-19) can be made less invasive, more comfortable and faster? A recent study published in The Lancet Digital Health suggests that a breath test could be used to diagnose Covid-19.

The study, conducted by researchers at the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine, suggests that a breath test could be used to diagnose Covid-19. The researchers developed a breath analyser that can detect specific biomarkers from exhaled breath, thus enabling rapid testing with multiplexed detection capabilities that can detect disease-specific biomarkers from exhaled breath, thus enabling rapid testing.

The proposed method uses a developed breath analyser that can detect specific biomarkers from exhaled breath. This is done with a breath analyser type device. It would usher in sweeping changes to the current testing regime which is associated with Covid-19, is associated with a sense of smell and where we might best direct some treatments, “says Andrew French, a lead author of the study.

The study found that the breath analyser could detect specific biomarkers from exhaled breath, which could then be used to diagnose Covid-19. The researchers tested the breath analyser on a group of patients with Covid-19 and healthy controls, and found that the breath analyser could accurately differentiate between the two groups.

“The breath analyser is highly accurate in differentiating between Covid-19 patients and healthy controls,” says Andrew French, a lead author of the study. “We believe that the breath analyser could be a valuable tool in diagnosing Covid-19.”
Get the flu vaccine to avoid a ‘twindemic’

By Shahnaz Aliabadi, Yasmin K. Siddiqui, Stephanie-Elizabeth Jones, Jorge Martinez and Ulric Van Helden

A global debt crisis is looming. Even before Covid-19 swept the world, the International Monetary Fund had issued a warning about developing countries’ exposure to debt. Now, as emerging economies struggle to cope with the pandemic, the situation is worse; with a high risk of outright debt crises. In an economic crisis of this scale, countries are adviser to suspend debt service.

In addition to the new forms of liquidity support and macro debt relief, the world economy cannot possibly return to pre-pandemic levels. The world is experiencing a severe climate crisis and social disruption. Climate scientists tell us that in order to meet the targets outlined in the Paris climate accord, global net-carbon emissions must fall by about 45% by 2030. And in 2020, the climate changes are already being felt all over the world, causing widespread damage and displacement of human beings.

But that will not be possible if governments are bogged down in debt crises. If anything, debt-service restrictions will push countries further into debt. The world economy is facing a perfect storm of several crises at the same time. Few countries are demanding a massive increase in Covid-19 relief and recovery efforts. This is happening concurrently with severe climate change and social disruption.

According to the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, developing countries’ repayment on their public external debts will see a $10-$15 billion rise in 2020 and 2021 alone. Hence, market analysts now suggest that about 10 countries may default on their debts. If the infrastructure and transportation sector is a snapshot of the world’s poorest countries, the challenges are only intensified by the Covid-19 crisis. Unfortunately, few debtor countries have taken this up so far, leaving a hole in Covid-19 relief efforts and possibly preventing the full recovery from the pandemic.

In light of these concerns, the G20 has called on the IMF to suspend debt service. But the results of those trials have not been made public. Western scientists are skeptical. Russia said on Thursday it plans to start human trials for its vaccine in August. But the results of those trials have not been made public. Western scientists are skeptical.

More than 150 million people in emerging and frontier economies are in extreme poverty and do not have access to health care. They need urgent support. For many people in the most vulnerable countries, the vaccine is a rare outcome. The greater the impact of the pandemic, the greater the need for urgent support.

This concept should now be expanded to include people who are living in extreme poverty. Developing countries will need additional resources and funds to respond to the current emergency. The countries that are doing well are investing in the health system and providing resources to help people who are affected by the pandemic.

A policy tool of this type would not only put us on the path to recovery, but also help prevent future debt-sustainability problems. If there is no change in the current trends, the G20’s debt-relief program will not be able to prevent a global economic crisis.
Aquatic Research Centre hatchery

200,000 baby shrimps produced at Aquatic Research Centre hatchery

The Aquatic Research Centre (ARC) at East Matlab has produced 200,000 baby shrimps at its state-of-the-art hatchery and prawn facility. ARC is a joint entity of the Ministry of Environment (MME) and Qatar Foundation.

The hatchery is the first of its kind in the region and will benefit the local aquaculture sector by providing quality baby shrimps. The facility is equipped with advanced technology to ensure the production of high-quality baby shrimps.

"The hatchery has been designed and built to meet international standards and is equipped with state-of-the-art technology to produce high-quality baby shrimps," said Dr. Ahmed Dallal, the ARC director.

The hatchery produces baby shrimps for local farmers and shrimp farmers, who can benefit from the facility by purchasing baby shrimps at a lower cost than importing them from other countries.

The hatchery is also equipped with a laboratory to test the quality of baby shrimps and ensure that they meet the standards set by the Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries.

The hatchery is supported by the Qatar Foundation, which aims to contribute to the sustainable development of Qatar's aquaculture sector.
