Call for awareness on voting etiquette

A number of Qatari lawyers have criticized the trend by well-known lawyer Abdul-Majeed Bin Ali Bin Fadhel, who recently announced that he would not vote in the upcoming elections, stating that the current situation in Afghanistan does not warrant voting. He cited the ongoing conflict and the uncertainty regarding the future of the country. Bin Fadhel's statement has sparked a debate among the legal community, with some expressing concern over the impact of the decision on the integrity of the electoral process.

Lawyer Nasser al-Ali, however, has encouraged voters to participate in the elections, emphasizing the importance of exercising the right to vote in democratic processes. He argued that voting is a fundamental right that helps ensure the stability and development of the country.

Influenza vaccine ‘reduces chances of catching infection’

The annual influenza vaccine is the best and safest way to reduce the chances of catching the flu and potentially spreading it if you’re ill, the Ministry of Public Health (MOPH) has reminded Qataris.

The MOPH reiterated the issued advisory by Dr. Yousef Al-Hamed, head of vaccination of the ministry, to strengthen the importance of getting the flu vaccine.

The MOPH, National Medical Corporation (NMC) and Primary Health Care Corporation (PHCC) continue to provide the annual influenza vaccination campaign which is available for Qataris.

The first phase of the 2021 campaign, which is open to key priority groups, includes individuals who are at risk of severe complications from the flu.

‘With the winter season fast approaching, it also means it’s the season for flu prevention and vaccination. Now is the time to get vaccinated because Influenza is not a simple disease as some people think. It already causes the admission of hundreds of thousands of people to hospitals across the world. And unfortunately, it also leads to the death of many. ’

‘To protect yourself, you have to take this influenza vaccine annually at the earliest convenience to make sure you are protected for the duration of the season. The vaccine is available throughout the nation at health centres across the country, and private clinics and government clinics, free of charge. ’

The said, ‘We encourage you to take it out, but especially children below five years, pregnant women, those above 65 years old, people with chronic diseases such as asthma, hypertension or heart problems, and healthcare workers.’

‘I would like to remind you that the annual influenza vaccine does not prevent you from Covid-19, and the Covid-19 disease does not protect you from seasonal influenza. So, we encourage you to take both to protect yourself and those around you.’

‘More information, including where to find the flu vaccine in Qatar and help about the Flu and Covid-19, can also be found on the campaign website: www.fluph.cqata’.dr

SPECIAL FORCES STAGE COUP IN GUINEA

Gambian military puts an end to Jammeh’s reign

IS attack kills 13 Iraqi police

Syrian government and rebel groups have been in talks since last month in Astana, with the Syrian government indicating it was planning to resume attacks in early September. The talks are aimed at reaching an agreement on a ceasefire and the evacuation of fighters and civilians from the city of Aleppo, where the regime has been heavily bombing rebel-held areas.

In Iraq, the situation remains tense after a weekend of violence in the country's north, where a series of coordinated attacks have left at least 13 people dead and dozens injured. The attacks are believed to be linked to a resurgence of the Islamic State group, which has recently regrouped in the area.

The Syrian army has been shelling rebel-held areas in the north of the country, in an apparent attempt to prevent them from being used as bases for opposition fighters. The shelling has caused widespread panic among civilians in the area.

The US has also renewed its calls for a political solution to the conflict in Syria, saying that the situation on the ground remains fragile and that more needs to be done to achieve a durable peace.

UAE loosens residency requirements with ‘green visa’

The UAE has announced new residency requirements for foreign workers, including a new ‘green visa’ for workers in certain high-skilled fields. The new visa will allow workers in fields such as technology, medicine, and engineering to live and work in the UAE for up to five years, with the possibility of renewal.

The new regulations are part of a broader effort by the UAE to attract more skilled workers and investment to the country, which has been facing economic challenges in recent years. The UAE has long been known for its generous residency policies for foreign workers, but the new visa is seen as a positive step towards further improving the country’s attractiveness as a destination for expatriates.

Robot extracts water from air

In a bid to increase water availability and combat the effects of climate change, researchers have developed a robot that can extract water from the air. The robot, called the ‘WATER’ (Water Acquisition Technology for Remote Extraction), can harvest water from the air in arid and humid environments and deliver it to humans for use.

The project was led by a team of scientists from the University of California, Irvine, who have been working on the development of the robot for several years. The robot uses a combination of sensors and algorithms to identify areas where water is present, and then uses a network of pumps and filters to extract and purify the water.

Sao Tome conducts postponed election

In Sao Tome and Principe, the presidential election that was scheduled for August 2019 has been postponed due to a lack of funding for the election campaign. The original date for the election was in December 2018, but the government was unable to raise the required funds, leading to the postponement.

The country is one of the poorest in the world, with a population of just over 200,000 people. The presidential election is seen as a key test for the stability of the country, which has been plagued by political instability in recent years.

Special forces stage coup in Guinea

In a surprise move, the Gambian military has removed President Yahya Jammeh from power after 22 years in office. Jammeh, who had been in power since 1994, was widely criticized for his authoritarian rule and human rights abuses.

The coup leader, Colonel Barrow, has announced that Jammeh will be held in detention while the country undergoes a transition period. The Gambian army has also deployed to the border with Senegal to prevent any potential interference from the international community.

$26bn opioid settlement to proceed: US firms

Reuters

WASHINGTON

Three large US drug companies agreed on Monday to pay $26bn to settle thousands of lawsuits that blamed them for fueling the opioid addiction epidemic, in a deal that US officials hailed as a major breakthrough in the crisis that has ravaged the country.

The companies in the accord are Johnson & Johnson, Purdue Pharma and Teva Pharmaceutical Industries. They will set up a $26bn new trust in the coming weeks.

The settlement, which must still be approved by US judges, is one of the largest in US legal history.

The deal came as US President Joe Biden announced plans to promote a US clean energy goal by 2030.

Biden’s administration has set a goal of reducing US greenhouse gas emissions by 50% below 2005 levels by 2030.

The president said the goal would be achieved by increasing levels of clean energy, including wind and solar power.

The settlement also includes a provision for developing a new version of the country’s opioid crisis, which has claimed more than 500,000 lives since 2000.

The companies will pay the settlement over the next 18 years.

Australia reports 1,684 new coronavirus cases

Australia. Sydney

Australia reported 1,684 new cases of the coronavirus on Saturday, the highest single-day rise since the pandemic began, as authorities struggle to contain a new outbreak in Sydney.

The state of New South Wales, which has been worst-hit by the latest wave of infections, recorded 1,615 new cases and 11 deaths, bringing the total number of infections in the state to 17,922.

The state's Premier, Gladys Berejiklian, said the latest figures were a "wake-up call", and called for a "better sense of responsibility" from the public.

"We've had 11 deaths and 1,615 new cases in the last 24 hours, which is absolutely devastating," she said.

"It's a very, very concerning time for Sydneysiders."

The latest outbreak in Sydney, which has seen a surge in cases linked to a cluster of infections in a Sydney airport, has raised concerns about the state's vaccination rates.

Austalia has recorded over 33,000 cases and 1,382 deaths since the pandemic began.

Covid vaccines for prison inmates improves conditions for prisoners

Vaccines were administered to some 1,000 prisoners in the state of New South Wales, Australia's worst-affected state, according to a report by the Australian Government.

The report said that as of Saturday, 1,000 inmates in NSW had received at least one dose of the Pfizer-BioNTech vaccine.

"The government is taking a comprehensive approach to ensuring that all citizens, including those in prison, have access to the vaccines," the report said.

It also said that the NSW矫正服务 (NSWC) had announced plans to increase the vaccination rate to 10,000 inmates by the end of September.

The report added that the NSW矫正服务 (NSWC) had said that the program would be expanded to include all prisoners in the state.

"The government is very committed to ensuring that all citizens, including those in prison, have access to the vaccines," the report said.

Girls Aloud star Harding dies of cancer

Tanya Freeman

The pop singer and TV personality Lea Harding, 40, has died from cancer. She had been diagnosed with the disease in January 2012, according to The Mirror. Harding, who was well-known for her work as a music producer and her appearances on TV shows such as Britain's Got Talent, had been battling cancer for several years before her death.

Harding was born on 19 May 1972 and began her career in music at the age of 19. She released her first single in 1993 and became known for her work with artists such as Madonna and Britney Spears. In 1994, she co-founded the band Girls Aloud, which went on to achieve widespread success. The band released several albums and singles, including their debut single, "I Want You with Me," which reached the top of the UK charts.

The news of Harding's death was confirmed by her publicist, who said: "Lea was a wonderful woman and a fantastic musician. She leaves behind her family and friends, who loved her very much. We will miss her dearly."

Harding is survived by her husband, Ben, and their two children, Libby and Leo. A service of thanksgiving will be held at a later date.

Indian farmers on rent agitations against new laws

The Farmers’ Union has announced a series of protest rallies and demonstrations against the new farm laws in India. The rallies are expected to take place in various parts of the country, including Delhi, Mumbai, and Kolkata.

The new laws, which were passed in September 2020, allow farmers to sell their produce directly to consumers, bypassing the traditional wholesale market system. However, farmers have criticized the laws, saying that they will lead to job losses and reduced incomes.

The Union has called for a nationwide strike on November 26, which is expected to disrupt normal life in many parts of the country. The farmers say that the new laws are unfair and will lead to the marginalization of small farmers.

WHO designates Mu as a ‘variant of interest’

Even as the Covid-19 pandemic continues to wreak havoc around the world for the 23rd consecutive month, a coronavirus variant known as Mu B.1.617.2 was designated by the World Health Organization (WHO) as a ‘variant of interest’ with caveats concerning its stability and impact on the virus. It is the fifth variant of interest currently being monitored by the WHO and is one of the several variants that threaten to dominate the planet, which began in December 2019 in China’s Wuhan City and climbed to a new high late last year, reaching 25 per cent in the World Health Organization (WHO) region of the Americas in November. The Mu variant, which has joined the ranks of the Alpha, Beta, Gamma and Delta variants, first detected in Colombia in January 2021, where cases increased to 14 per cent, according to a study released in March by the University of South Florida, Tampa, Florida, United States.

There are some concerns that a dozen pandemic strains across the world, who have started offering different and atypical symptom profiles, it is not clear what the Mu variant’s symptoms may be like. Several studies have so far been able to determine that the Mu variant is not likely to have any significant impact on the country.

Scientists believe that the Mu variant is a combination of different mutations that indicate potential properties of future strains. It is also believed that the Mu variant is more likely to escape the host’s immune system, making it more difficult to control the virus.

“The Mu variant has a constellation of mutations that indicate potential properties of future strains,” the WHO said in a statement last February, noting mutations that it may be more resistant to current vaccines and other treatments. “It is important that all countries continue to monitor and sequence viruses,” it added. Last May, the Mu variant was named a ‘variant of interest’ by the WHO, which means it is under close surveillance.

Study suggests Delta does not cause more severe childhood Covid

The study had previously shown that children with Covid-19 tend to have a milder course of the disease than adults, with fewer hospitalizations and deaths. However, the study also found that children with Covid-19 have a higher risk of developing long-term complications, such as respiratory issues, than adults.

The study, which included data from more than 40,000 children, was conducted by researchers at the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine. The researchers analyzed data from over 40,000 children under the age of 18 who were hospitalized with Covid-19 in the United States between March 2020 and February 2022.

The researchers found that children with Covid-19 were more likely to develop long-term complications than adults, including respiratory issues, heart problems, and neurological effects. The study also found that children with Covid-19 were more likely to develop these complications than children who had previously been infected with other viruses, such as the common cold or influenza.

The findings suggest that children with Covid-19 are more likely to develop long-term complications than adults and should be considered for additional follow-up and monitoring. The study also highlights the importance of continued surveillance and research into the long-term effects of Covid-19 on children.

The study was published in the journal Pediatrics, which is a peer-reviewed medical journal that focuses on the health of children and adolescents. The study was supported by the National Institutes of Health and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.
UN calls for end to Afghan violence

UN Secretary-General Antonio Guterres has called for an immediate and sustained ceasefire in Afghanistan amid fears of a new surge in violence. He said the conflict has long become a “suffering” for all Afghans.

The report, compiled by the UN mission in Afghanistan, is based on confidential information from human rights groups and Afghan insiders.

The report says the war has been going on since 1979 and has resulted in the deaths of over 52,000 people. It also notes that the Afghan government has failed to make any significant progress in terms of stabilizing the country.

QF starts donation drive to help Afghan refugees

Let's show the Afghans that they are welcome, that they have a home here, and that we care: HE Sheikh Hind

People can help by donating or taking part in a volunteering initiative

Qatari first lady, HE Sheikh Hind, has encouraged people to donate to help Afghan refugees. In a statement, she mentioned that there are a lot of things we can do to support them, such as providing food, clothing, and other basic necessities. She also called on people to volunteer their time to help with the resettlement process.

The donation drive aims to collect items such as clothing, food, and other essentials for the Afghan refugees. The donated items will be distributed to the refugees by the Qatari Red Crescent Society.

"We are all part of the same community, and we should support those in need," said HE Sheikh Hind. "By donating, you can make a difference in the lives of these refugees and help them start a new life in Qatar.

In addition to donating, people can also volunteer their time to help with the resettlement process. This could involve helping to set up new homes for the refugees, or assisting them with daily activities.

The donation drive will be ongoing, and it is encouraged that people continue to donate and volunteer throughout the month.
