Shibuno clings to US Women’s Open Lead by one over Olson

Boston, Massachusetts (US): American Harris English birdied the 18th hole to win his first major championship on Sunday, using a steady putting approach to outlast the late charges of Justin Rose and Louis Oosthuizen.

English drained a 30-foot birdie on the par-4 18th to carry a one-shot advantage over Rose and Oosthuizen, who finished together in second place. English, Rose and Oosthuizen all finished at 8-under par, but English avoided a difficult putt on the 18th to hold on for the victory.

The victory is English’s second major title, following his 2012 U.S. Open crown. He is the first American to win the U.S. Open since 2015, when Jordan Spieth captured his third major title.

“I’m just proud of the way we did it,” English said. “It’s not easy. It was really a grind out there today.”

“I’m just thrilled to be the champ,” English added. “I’ve been playing well for a long time now, and it’s just a matter of putting it all together.”

Rose and Oosthuizen finished in second place, each shooting 4-under par for the day. Rose had a 72 on Sunday after starting with a 69 on Saturday, while Oosthuizen shot 69 after opening with a 72.

The final round of the 2020 U.S. Open was interrupted by rain, and play was suspended on Saturday. The tournament was held at Winged Foot Golf Club in Mamaroneck, New York.

The U.S. Open is part of golf’s Grand Slam, along with the Masters, British Open and U.S. PGA Championship. The tournament is played annually on a different course each year, with the next edition scheduled for 2021 at San Francisco’s TPC Harding Park.
