As the two forced each other wide, Oliveira joined them. He took advantage of Suzuki's Johan Zarco's aimless right-footed effort and immediately tried to find his way around the bike, finding a front wheel on the bike in the process.

The interruption cost Suzuki's Johan Zarco an opening-stand bonus, while the bike could be the last vehicle to be able to take part in the competition for the second time. Oliveira made the most of it and was looking to get the best possible start from起点 for the second race.

During his innings, Azhar became the first batsman to score 15,000 Test runs in a single match. After a stormy start, he was eventually dismissed for 152, leaving the scores 1-0. Both sides played out a drawn second Test at Southampton, England, in fading light but amid the sight of the crowd.

The only bowlers to have taken 50 or more Test wickets were Anil Kumble (619) from India and Shane Warne (708) from Australia. Muttiah Muralitharan (800) fared well, but he would have been more low had not three catches been dropped off the 38-year-old's bowling with the new ball.

After England captain Joe Root had rapped the Alle-wiss on the stump, the umpires decided the fading light was not suitable for Pakistan to show. England thought they had Azhar, but he had already been dismissed, and the Aga Khan Foundation won.

Kovac starts Monaco reign with Reims comeback draw

"I was shocked, after two shots we conceded two goals. But the reaction was good."}

Kovac, who left Bayern Munich for the Principality, was appointed as the new coach of Monaco in recent days. He led the side to a 1-1 draw against Reims on Saturday, which was a satisfactory result considering the circumstances.

"Of course, it was a bit of a shock for the players and the staff to see me on the bench," Kovac said after the match. "But I was very happy with the way they played and the way they reacted after conceding the first goal."
Ceperin considers future 'final eight' format for CLeague

‘If it is one match, if one team scores then the other has to score as soon as possible’

The current format is locked in place contractually until 2023-24 but discussions are due to begin later this year on the structure for the competition next season.

CONGESTED CALENDAR

The tournament was played over ten days and closing the season in the congested international calendar would be detrimental to clubs, players and the competition itself, Ceferin stated.

'The format we have now is not ideal, but we have to do what we can,' Ceferin admitted. 'But I do not think we can change it. We could do it for one year, maybe even give it a try. But it is too difficult to do it.'

More exciting matches for fans

'When this crazy situation ends,' Ceferin added, 'we will have to discuss these sorts of issues again.'

Ceferin expressed his concerns about the 'final eight' tournament and the demand to play in one city.

'With the current format, you play in one city; if you play in two, you have to travel,' he said. 'It's almost like playing two matches in one.'

He concluded: 'If you have to play two matches in one city, you have to travel to the other city and it's like playing two matches in one.'

Parma soccer manager D'Aversa after loss of ‘mutual enthusiasm’

Parma have dismissed coach Roberto D'Aversa, after seven months in charge, following poor results and a 1-0 loss at Empoli.

D'Aversa was dismissed in an item of business at the Parma board meeting. The club is now looking for a new manager.

Parma were 11th in the Serie A table before the suspension of the league due to the coronavirus pandemic and have not won a league game since February 1.

“Mutual enthusiasm’

Parma's sporting director Oliver Bierhoff said: ‘We have decided to part ways with Roberto D'Aversa and look for a coach with new ideas and a different style of play.'

SPOTTLIGHT

A "final eight" format would mean that the top 12 teams in Europe's most successful women's club competition would meet in the knockout round, with four teams advancing to the semifinals.

Ceferin said: "When you have a final eight, you have more dramatic matches and more exciting matches for fans."
