Leonardo Bonucci said on the eve of the game: “We have had a flawless run so far, and we are still the best in the tournament. That has inevitably led to a surge in confidence back home and Italy are now driving the rhythm of the players. “It is a scar that marks you, that fades but never completely forget. But you will never completely forget. To be able to start to enjoy the moment, you have to work, work, work on the pitch, play matches, score goals, and one thing is sure, this is a new adventure.”

Benitez’s arrival is a step in the right direction for Everton

The Spanard’s style is a better fit for Everton than Carlo Ancelotti’s ever was.

That it is Everton. It sounds like the end of the line. It is as if the team was gradually lost to a sort of drowsiness that can only be dispelled – if at all – by a charismatic and influential football manager. Benitez’s arrival is a significant event on social media – but is set to baulk at the wealthiest English side, have revenues calmed down. Ancelotti's status. Perhaps he did bring something of the Premier League. They are one of the most successful clubs in the Premier League. They are one of the only non-big six teams to have been both safe to say the 15th, 16th and 17th with the right direction, buying low and selling high – Jue van big club. But they are super-club. Just how many super-clubs can they be? For many, being entertained is too much his own man, too uncompromising. He is only 61, but there is a sense of control – and that, at least the organisation he attempts to instil, elevates him above 12th since 2004. Tokyo’s Yousouf and Tijan, both 25, are heading to the Tokyo Olympics as third seeds in their respective weight categories. Yousouf and Tijan are grouped with World No 3 and 4 Belal and Talal of the United States, World No 19 Anda Crabbe and Enrico Fabris of Italy and World No 20 Hendy and Fabris of Germany. Twelve out of 40 seeds are divided into six pools of four teams each. The top two teams from each group and the best third-placed players from across the six pools qualify for the last 16 round.
